CHARGE RIOTERS FIRED FIRST IN IPSWICH STRIKE TRAGEDY

IPSWICH, June 12.—Government witnesses testified at the riot hearing in Ipswich District Court today that the rioters fired first in last Tuesday night's fatal clash between the police and strikers from the Ipswich Hosiery Mills.

Thomas J. Holliday, national secretary of the textile branch of the I. W. W., with office at No. 104 Hanover street, Boston, was defaulted by Judge Sayward when he failed to respond when his case was called. A capias was ordered for him and Judge Sayward gave instructions for the Boston police to be notified. Holliday was out on $100 bail on a charge of violating a town ordinance yesterday by trying to start a parade without a permit.

Holliday Defaulted

The first cases called were those of the three I. W. W. leaders charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Mrs. Nicolata Pasciolous in the riot. They are: Carroll L. Fingree and wife, Mary L. Fingree, of Lowell and Nathan Hermann of Boston. At the request of their local counsel, Harry M. Sayward, their cases were continued without bail to Thursday, June 19. District Attorney Henry C. Attwill of Essex, who came up from Lynn to take personal charge of the prosecution of these three cases, left, when the continuance was granted. Then the remaining cases were called.

The cases were prosecuted by Edgar F. Dupray, town counsel. When Holliday's name was called and he did not respond Mr. Dupray asked for a default, and Attorney Sayward, for the strikers, objected, saying he was sure Holliday would appear. Judge Sayward rose and said:

"The time has passed when the court or government can be made light of."

Judge Sayward personally called Holliday's name twice and then defaulted him. At 1:30 Holliday arrived, saying he had been in Lawrence. On hearing of the default proceedings he hurried to court.

It was decided to try all the riot cases together. The first witness was Charles G. Hull, chairman of the Selectmen. He said he saw members of the strike committee elbow operatives off the sidewalk, saw a woman arrested and interference made and then fighting became general.

"I saw bottles and stones thrown out of windows," said Chairman Hull. "I saw a man throw a stone at an officer and then the two shots when the officer chased him. These were the first two shots fired. The man disappeared around the corner of a bakery. Then I heard four shots fired. There was more rioting. Men and women were assaulting the officers and shooting. I read the riot act and called on all loyal citizens to assist the police keep order."

Witness testified he saw Patrolman Moore of Lawrence, Wood of Swampscott and State Officer McDonald with revolvers levelled, shooting toward the crowd near the bakery.

State Officer McDonald said he heard John Chips, one of the defendants, order strike pickets to return to their posts, saying "To ——— with the police!" He warned Chips he was liable to arrest. He heard two shots and ran to the bakery.

JURY IS PICKED FOR THE SEGEE FORGERY TRIAL

Samuel A. Segee, chairman of the Revere Board of Assessors, was put on trial before Judge Brown in the Suffolk, Superior Criminal Court today, charged with falsifying public records, on fifteen counts.

Segee was indicted after a searching Grand Jury investigation. When the trial opened, Judge Brown overruled the motion to quash the indictment, argued by Edward J. Barry, representing Mr. Segee.

Mrs. Ida McLeod, Segee's landlady for years, was in court. The clerks in the assessors' office, Mrs. Gladys Hamilton and Arthur C. Prendergast, who discovered the alleged discrepancies in the books, were waiting to testify, with tax boxes, receipts and other records.

The jury was chosen in record time. Here it is:

William J. Power, No. 40 Fox street, a manager, foreman.

Lewis M. Woodbridge, Hotel Bowdoin, bookkeeper.

Albert D. Morse, No. 9 Bartlett street, agent.

John F. Cronin, No. 113 Chambers street, waiter.

James C. Hoye, No. 4 Austin avenue, janitor.

Albert J. Norwood, No. 7 Harvard street, clerk.

Patrick J. Cavanagh, No. 1 Bearse avenue, millhand.

Joseph D. Muldoon, No. 29 Maple avenue, carpenter.

Daniel Coughlin, No. 11 Benedict street, fireman.

Charles A. Nelson, No. 85 Clifford street, cabinetmaker.

John McQuaid, No. 75 Harmon street, carpenter.

FLAMES DESTROY 4 BLOCKS

Families in Adjoining Tenements Flee Water Front Blaze on East First St.

CHEMICALS EXPLODE

Hundreds of women and children fled for their lies when a South Boston waterfront fire today endangered several acres of tenement and manufacturing buildings. Four alarms were sounded.

Sixty men and women empoyes fled from the factory building of the F. L. and J. C. Codman Company. Eighteen were driven out of F. A. Howard's factory.

In addition, whole blocks of tenement houses caught or were endangered, and the inmates caught up whatever they could curry in their hands and scurried through a shower of falling brands to safety.

Women fainted. Children were screaming. The few men at home half dragged the unconscious women through the streets.

The entire district bounded by East Second, H and K streets and the waterfront was endangered.

Burning Brands Carried by Gale.

The firemen fought desperately to check the flames, making their stand on K street and East Second streets, squarely in the path along which the wind was driving the flames. Chief Mullen was in charge and Deputy Chief Grady took command on K street.

The high wind carried brands for a hundred yards from the burning house. The heat was so intense that buildings a hundred feet from the fire burst into a flame like a match above a lamp chimney. Some of the smaller wooden buildings seemed to go up in a single flash of flame.

For an hour after the fire started the firemen could only fight back the flames. They were helpless. The fire was master. Everywhere dramatic scenes were enacted, and the firemen worked like Trojans. Citizens helped in every way possible. Scores of police guarded the fire lines and helped the work of rescuing inmates of the blazing tenements.

The fire started in the shop of the Grueby Faience Company, at the corner of L and East First streets. It swept rapidly through the block bounded by K, L and East First streets, and four factories were ruined in short order.

Fire Boats Aid Engines.

From this factory it jumped to that of F. A. Howard, a three-story building, and then to the F. L. Codman Company factory at the corner of K and East First streets.

The South Boston Machine Company's plant caught and went up like tinder.

The district bounded by East Second street, K street and H street was endangered. Every available piece of apparatus was hurried to the fire, and the fireboats in the harbor worked from the water.

The F. A. Howard Company's plant is at No. 580 East First street. It manufactures "dustless dusters." When the flames struck the building, the eighteen employes escaped to the street just before oils and chemicals used in their processes exploded.

Well, if It's Coming It'll Come Tomorrow

Prepare to Greet Your Hard Luck on Friday, 13, 1913.

Oh what is so rare as the day in June
When the big black cat is queen,
When Jinxes and Jonahs and hoodoos croon
13—13—13?

Tomorrow will be Friday, the thirteenth of June, 1913. The following disasters will occur to the average citizen:

He will eat three meals (more or less square).

He will continue to be reasonably happy on a world (more or less round).

He will work (and hate it).

He will get home (and like it).

He will read a lot of imbecilities about the unlucky number "13."

Highwayman Taken When Gun Fails

Holds Up Doctor and Woman on Brockton Road.

TAUNTON, June 12.—On his way to Boston to get even with a policeman, William H. Black met a couple out driving on the road between here and Brockton. He held up the buggy, and when the occupants whipped up the horse, he fired two shots—harmlessly—after them. In the buggy were Dr. Charles R. Burden and a woman. Dr. Burden notified the police and they found Black near the scene of the attempted holdup. He snapped his revolver at them at pointblank range. But the cartridges failed to explode. Black was arrested and in the District Court today pleaded guilty and was held in $300 for the Grand Jury.

Binkie pleaded not guilty and was held in $200 bail for a hearing on June 20.

HOUSE OVER-RIDES MELLEN GRAB VETO

The House of Representatives today passed over Governor Foss' veto the Western Trolley Merger Bill.

The vote was 163 to 48. Many Democrats and Progressives voted in favor of the bill.

NEW HAVEN LOBBYISTS ACTIVE.

The passage of the bill was effected through the efforts of twelve New Haven lobbyists, who, in the most active campaign ever seen in the State House, button-holed Representatives in the corridors while the debate was in progress.

There is a strong possibility that an immediate investigation will be begun, to throw light on the methods of these lobbyists, and to ascertain how they were able to turn many of the Democrats in the House to violate their platform pledges.

EVERY DEMOCRAT WHO VOTED FOR THIS BILL IS A RECREANT AND A TRAITOR TO HIS PARTY. For the Democratic platform last Fall said:

"We are opposed to the ownership or control of our street railways by steam railroads, and we believe that it should go on further in this Commonwealth."

The leaders of the Democracy in the State today united in declaring that the bill should not be passed, that Governor Foss's veto should be sustained, and that Democrats who gave the New Haven their votes on the bill would have to answer to the party as well as to their constituents.

The bill was passed today in the House by unusually autocratic methods. Debate was stamped out. All attempts to give the members a chance to read the veto message and consider the real merits of the bill were defeated.

The motion to postpone consideration of the veto so as to give the members a chance to consider the veto carefully, was beaten by an overwhelming voice vote. The New Haven machine worked smoothly. Then debate was limited to one hour, the gag rule was rigidly enforced and the roll call was ordered.

One hundred and sixty-three to forty-eight was the final vote.

Representative Benjamin F. Haines of Medford made the motion to postpone consideration of the bill. He said:

"The printed copies of the veto were delivered to the members of the House just ten minutes ago. It is impossible for them to have properly considered the matter since then."

Representative Naphen of Natick supported the motion. Representative Mac-

DISSOLUTION OF NEW HAVEN IS PLANNED

New Haven stock dropped several points in a swift break of the market just as soon today. The stock fell below par, after opening unchanged at 100¾.

The break was explained when word came from Washington that President Wilson plans to name Louis D. Brandeis, the Boston attorney and railroad expert, as special prosecuting attorney for the department of justice, in proceedings to dissolve the New Haven-Boston & Maine merger under the Sherman antitrust law.

Medical Examiner Leary has ordered an inquest into the death of Miss Ella S. Babcock, 50 years, of No. 654 Massachusetts avenue, who tripped over a towline between two automobiles in Hunting-ton avenue at Exeter street Monday night, receiving injuries which resulted in her death at the City Hospital yesterday morning.

GOV. FOSS VETOES THE WASHBURN BILL.

Immediately after the House had overridden Gov. Foss' veto of the Trolley merger bill today, it sent up a veto of the specialized Washburn railroad bill, the last important measure of the legislative year.

ATTEAUX CASE NO-PROSSED BY DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

District Attorney Pelletier today announced the indictments against Frederick F. Atteaux on counts charging him with forgery during the Lawrence strike of 1912, and on file the case against Dennis J. Collins, the Lynn cop-killer, who was the only one of the three indicted by the grand jury.

As Collins turned State's evidence he was given immunity. In view of the fact that the jury disagreed on five of the six counts against Atteaux, who is an expert chemist and dealer in mill supplies, the county prosecutor could have tried him over again, but didn't think it worth while.

TELLS OF CASH SPENT BY BEET SUGAR LOBBY

WASHINGTON, June 12—Further identification of the sugar lobby in Washington was continued by the Overman committee today, the free sugar men, whose view has been espoused by President Wilson, being on the list of witnesses to be examined.

Under the lash of President Wilson's demand for free sugar the growers who contributed to the Democratic campaign fund have begun to give the committee bearing on the inside management of the last campaign.

Truman G. Palmer of Chicago, secretary of the United States beet sugar industry, estimated the capital of beet sugar factories at $84,000,000.

Palmer said $14,744 to maintain his offices in Washington during April and [illegible] was spent on publicity. Since November last, he spent $5,027. Over $15,000 has been spent in the last six months in publicity and $4,000 in motion pictures.

Senator Reed said he intended to compel the production of the books of the beet sugar association so that it might be known what the sums were spent.

The committee has frankly begun to lose interest in its inquiry. Paul Christian, former private secretary of former Senator Foster of Louisiana, said he engaged in lobbying against free sugar at the request of Senator Randell. The Louisiana lobbyists, he said, had co-operated with Truman Palmer, representing beet sugar interests and the so-called domestic sugar producers' bureau.

Biggest Mackerel Day at T Wharf

Four Years' Record Broken by the Arrival of 121,000 Fish.

Today was the biggest mackerel day T wharf has known for four years and fishermen and buyers were jubilant over the outlook for a profitable season. Six schooners arrived before noon with 121,600 fresh mackerel and 746 barrels salted.

In addition to this about 70,000 fresh mackerel arrived from Yarmouth in the steamship Prince Arthur and enough more by rail from New Bedford, Newport and other small ports to bring the grand total up to more than 200,000 fish.

The demand was steady and the price dropped only 3 cents from yesterday's figure. Sales today were made at 18 cents for bloaters and 14 cents for mediums.

INQUIRY ON JAP YACHT SEIZURE WILL BE MADE

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House, according to announcement of Representative Henry D. Flood, its chairman, today will investigate the seizure by Japan of the American yacht Columbia in the port of Wakayama, if advices to the State Department show that J. Harvey Ladew, its owner, has been treated unfairly.

Mr. Flood said he would call on the State Department for all the particulars of the case, after which he would lay it before his committee. In no event will Japan be allowed to confiscate the yacht, said Mr. Flood, without an investigation by Congress and the State Department.

Mr. Flood indicated that the incident might have an important effect on the framing of any new treaties with Japan. The effect of it would be, in his opinion, to turn public opinion in the United States strongly against any further concessions to the Japanese.

Secretary of State Bryan said today he did not think the affair would develop into an international incident, since the detention of the vessel was in keeping with the navigation customs of all civilized nations.

THREE of the American tourists, all prominent New York society folks, arrested by the Japanese when the yacht Columbia was seized after putting into the fortified and forbidden port of Wakayama for repairs. to Calcutta, Singapore and various Chinese and Japanese ports.

After spending some time in Japan the party intended to travel 4,000 miles on the trans-Siberian Railroad to St. Petersburg, while the yacht was to return to New York by way of Panama. The journey was to cover 10,000 miles, exclusive of numerous side trips.

The Columbia was launched in June, 1899, and although a private yacht is built on the lines of a cruiser.

LADEW RELATIVES AMAZED BY JAPS' SEIZURE OF YACHT

NEW YORK, June 12.—Relatives of the Ladew party in New York were amazed yesterday when they heard of the arrest of the 104-foot steel yacht Columbia. Frank M. Wall, a wealthy cord manufacturer, whose daughter, Miss Anne M. Wall, who is with the Ladews, sailed last night he would appeal to the State Department to make an immediate investigation of the arrest.

The members of the yachting party, besides Mr. and Mrs. Ladew and Miss Wall, are: Miss Elsie Ladew and her brother, Harvey S. Ladew; Miss Hilda Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Artemus H. Holmes; Jean M. Cadwalader, Jr., and Joseph and Oliver Ladew, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Ladew.

"Yesterday I received a post card from my daughter," said Mr. Wall, "saying that she was having a jolly time, and that they were about to start for Russia."

The Columbia was sent to Naples last November, and a month later Miss Ladew and their friends sailed on the Kronprinzessin Cecile. Starting from Naples, the yachting party passed through the Sues Canal, the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean to Bombay. From Cairo they went

Fish Prices Fall as Grueby Is Delayed

The "maddest" man in Boston today is Captain Enos Nickerson of the auxiliary fishing schooner Frances S. Grueby, in today from the Cape Shore fishing grounds with 27,000 fresh mackerel. On Monday the schooner's propeller dropped off as she was starting for Boston, delaying her arrival for twenty-four hours. As the price of mackerel went off three cents during that twenty-four hours Captain Nickerson figures his loss at $810, plus the price of a new propeller. The Saladin, another auxiliary, lost her propeller in the bay last night.

Man Arrested for Girl's Watch Theft

Charles W. Lazzarra, twenty-six, of No. 141 Pembroke street, was arrested at Police Headquarters today, charged with the larceny of a gold watch from Miss Anna W. Withycombe of No. 5027 Washington street, West Roxbury, June 2, while she was being fitted at her dressmaker's. Lazzarra, it is charged, entered the private room where Miss Withycombe's outer clothes were.

BOSTON MAN SLAPS COUNT'S FACE ON LINER

NEW YORK, June 12.—Stephen Gray, an athletic young Bostonian, was the hero of the liner Berlin's voyage from Genoa, when he slapped Count Alberto Bianconi's face, in retaliation for similar treatment the Count gave a little girl in the first cabin list. The Count, who also lost a big sum at cards, kept to his stateroom during the rest of the voyage and dodged into a cab as soon as the liner docked.

Monsignor Carlo Pietropaoli, Archbishop of Calcide, the Rev. Cornelius O'Keefe, chaplain at West Point, Mrs. S. S. Kohlsaat of Chicago, Henry George of New York, General Theodore Forbes and the Duchess Delmonte were among those who saw the incident.

Count Bianconi was sitting on deck chatting with Miss Mary Leary, when Dorothy and Margaret, the little daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George R. Gage, happened along. They chaffed him until he lost his temper. When one of them, aged eight, got in range he gave her a smart slap. The child cried.

The Bostonian stepped up briskly. "How would you like to have that done to you?" he asked.

Count Bianconi eyed him through his monocle. Those near the two did not hear the reply, but Gray swung hard with the flat of his hand on the cheek of the other. Little Miss Gage danced with joy and the ladies shrieked.

The Count rushed down the companionway. Spectators expected him to return with swords or pistols, or that at least there would be a challenge to combat. Nothing of the sort happened.

There was a dance that night and Gray was the lion of the evening.

Mayor Would Coin Seven-Cent Pieces

In This Way Nickel Advance Would Be Checked and 'H. C. of L.' Eased.

Mayor Fitzgerald believes that the coinage of seven-cent pieces will help solve the high cost of living problem.

The five cent increase in the price of shines and the five-cent increase in the price of shaves in many shops which are due to the demands of organized labor, could be effectively compromised in a manner whereby the customer would not pay all of the additional cost if the government coined seven-cent pieces.

"As it is now," says the Mayor, "the price of shines is increased 100 per cent, not because the employes demand that increase in wages, but because the increased expenses of the proprietor are more conveniently met by the nickel advance. So the customer furnishes an additional profit."

"I feel that with the constant advance of commodities and the necessity of those earning nominal salaries to make every penny count, the public economy and convenience would be served if the government issued a seven-cent piece or even 6½ and one-fourth cent piece, making it possible, for example, to get four shines for a quarter, would prove extremely convenient."

The Mayor says that he proposes to have a conference with the Massachusetts Congressmen upon the subject and endeavor to start the machinery of the government to work for the new coin.

SHIELD GIRL THIEF'S NAME IN SAUGUS HIGH

The name of a girl student who is said to have been responsible for a series of robberies of money and clothing at the Saugus High School and who returned part of the money when Principal James F. Butterworth threatened to expose her, is being shielded today by the authorities.

The girl is said to belong to one of the most prominent families in Saugus. Principal Butterworth found evidence which pointed to her as the thief. When one of the girls said money had been taken from her pockets the principal went to the room in which the suspect recited and announced that unless the money was returned to the teacher's desk he would expose the guilty party.

Principal Butterworth returned and found on one corner of the desk a handkerchief, in the corner of which was tied the money.

NEW YORK IN CAMPAIGN TO SAVE BABIES

ALBANY, June 12.—At the opening here today of a conference on infant welfare, the State Health Department begins a campaign to "save the babies."

The conference has for its object to inaugurate a vigorous campaign for the reduction of infant mortality. Health officers and others interested in the work are present from all over the State.

The special public health commission appointed by Governor Sulzer advised that "each city with a population in excess of 10,000 and having an industrial population should have an infant welfare station."

The object of such stations was to educate the mothers properly to care for themselves and their babies. Medical supervision and proper food should be provided.

Commissioner Eugene H. Porter, health officer of the State, in his report called attention to the fact that there had been "a steady and well marked decrease shown from year to year during the past nine years and a great saving in infant lives during the past three years, as shown by the large decrease in the number of deaths notwithstanding the great increase in population."

August REDUCTION Sale

Begins Today, June 12th

I am compelled to Move My Business Calendar 60 Days Ahead to Dispose of a $321,000 Excess of Stock

CLOTHES VALUES Impossible to DUPLICATE ELSEWHERE

I am the victim of misfortune. When a few months ago I succeeded to the entire control of this immense business I immediately set in action gigantic plans for its expansion which will eventually mean GEORGES stores in every principal city throughout the country. By strenuous hustling I had already completed negotiations for the opening of five new branches this spring—and had made all my stock preparations accordingly—only to be stricken with septemia, necessitating an operation, in-capacitating me for more than 60 days and rendering impossible the carrying out of my original plans.

Now, in addition to my regular stocks, in themselves far heavier than they should be because of the extremely backward season due to unfavorable weather conditions of April and May, I am frightfully overloaded with all the goods intended for my new stores. My present stock excess I approximate to be $321,000, the greater portion of which is awaiting distribution to my stores when they have space to receive it.

The public knows my methods. I NEVER CONSIDER IT SENSATIONAL TO PUBLISH REAL FACTS. I am harshly criticized, but I seem to thrive on it—thirty-four years of SUCCESS now dignify the GEORGES name. During all that time, whenever a critical situation presented itself, instead of wire-pulling behind the scenes, the public has been appealed to. I have a reputation in all five cities where my stores are located for being the first merchant to take a loss when conditions necessitate. I ALWAYS GET RESULTS—by keeping faith with the public and by giving saving opportunities that it pays them to grasp. In offering you AUGUST REDUCTIONS NOW, I unhesitatingly pronounce this to be the VALUE-GIVING effort of my career.

My Windows Reveal the Marvelous Savings

$13.50 and $15 Garments $9.50

$16.50 & $18 Garments $12.50

$20 & $22.50 Garments $14.50

$25 and $28 Garments $16.50

And so on, $30 suits now $19.50, up to the finest Custom Model Garments in my stock, formerly $40 and $45—now $29.50. Everything included, two and three-piece Suits, light-weight Overcoats, odd Trousers, Outing Trousers, Raincoats, etc., etc., from my clever new narrow English Sack Suits and smart Norfolk styles in the most extreme fancy fabrics to staple blue and black serges and unfinished worsteds in strictly conservative cut. All built on lines distinctive from ready modes—many suits quarter, half and full silk lined.

WIFE CHARGES MRS. DUKE WON PENCE IN 4 DAYS

NEW YORK, June 12.—Additional details became known today concerning the charges by Mrs. Catherine Soper Pence, that four days after he met the beautiful Mrs. Lillian N. Duke, divorced wife of J. B. Duke, the millionaire tobacco king, former Congressman Lafayette Pence of Colorado, her husband, left her, and has never returned to her home.

In conjunction with her suit for separation, on grounds of extreme cruelty and desertion, Mrs. Pence also sues Mrs. Duke for the alienation of her husband's affections, asking the sum of $150,000 as damages against Mrs. Duke.

Pence has been spoken of in Washington as a possible appointee to an ambassadorship. Mrs. Pence today declared that the reason she is not suing for outright divorce is so that she may thwart the alleged plan of her husband to marry Mrs. Duke as soon as he is free.

Following her husband's alleged desertion, Mrs. Pence states that detectives in her employ, obtaining the assistance of bellboys and telephone girls in the Belnord apartments on upper Broadway, satisfied her that Mr. Pence and Mrs. Duke were living in the same apartments. The two, she says, discovered that they were being watched, and Mrs. Duke sublet her apartment. Thereafter she went with Pence to the Ebbett House in Washington, the complaint says, and to Cuba.

On their return to this city they moved into sub-let rooms in the Clifton apartments in Riverside Drive, the complaint relates.

"My agents tried to obtain the same means of information at the Clifton which they had at the Belnord," Mrs. Pence said, "but were unable to do so, because the employes there said they had been previously engaged by Mrs. Duke and it would not be honorable for them to help me."

Mrs. Pence lives at the Rockingham apartments, Broadway and Fifty-sixth streets. She has inherited enough from the estate of her father to live quietly, independently of her husband, and to prosecute her suit vigorously.

Mayor in Hot Race to Review the Ninth

Councillor McDonald Almost Wore Mayor's Suit on Reviewing Stand.

Councillor Daniel J. McDonald, dressed in Mayor Fitzgerald's well-known silk hat and Prince Albert coat, reminiscent of the palmiest days of Adonis, would have reviewed the "Fighting Ninth" on its parade past City Hall, if the Mayor hadn't broken all speed records to appear on the reviewing stand just in time for the moving pictures of the gala event.

Secretary Moore was greatly disturbed when he heard the first strains of "Sweet Adeline" floating up School street to find that the Mayor was apparently going to miss the engagement. The Mayor could not be found at the nearby office of the Republic, or anywhere else by messenger or telephone, although all City Hall lines were kept humming.

Councillor McDonald was crowding himself into the Mayor's emergency suit when City Messenger Leary breathlessly shouted out the glad news that His Honor was at hand. The Mayor smilingly admitted it was a hot day on which to have to run.

SWIFT PREDICTS RESULTS IN ICE TRUST INQUIRY

Attorney-General Swift, who is conducting the State-wide investigation of the Ice Trust under the order fathered in the House by Representative Hays, today said:

"Important developments may be expected shortly as a result of our inquiry into the ice situation. We are not yet ready, however, to make public the information that we have already secured, as we do not believe it would be advisable to do so at this time.

"Plans are being completed to cover the entire State in the most thorough manner. Meanwhile we are working on the evidence we have in hand, and I can promise that it will soon be known the investigation has not been without a definite result."

Lorimer Tells How to Get Honest Vote

CHICAGO, June 12.—Testifying before the election commission investigating alleged crookedness in the last election in Chicago, William Lorimer, formerly United States Senator from Illinois, said:

"The election of last November was just as it has been in the past. As a general proposition, I don't much believe in this idea of stealing votes."

Asked for a remedy of insuring honest elections, Lorimer said:

..."Improve the human family."

Dr. Friedmann May Make Home in U. S.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Dr. F. F. Friedmann is preparing to leave this country for Germany next Thursday, but indications are given that he may soon return and perhaps make his home in this country. All this depends largely upon the outcome of the investigation of the Government and of the Boards of Health in the various cities into his tuberculosis remedy.

Mrs. G. Steadman Thomas' Pomeranian, Enscliffe Swastika, was adjudged the best dog in the show entered by any member of the Kennel Club of America.

The affair was attended by many prominent society women with their entries. Dogs entered by Mrs. E. H. Seagrave, Mrs. R. H. Carey, Mary Dickson, Mrs. P. A. Dallen and Mrs. Thomas Began were other winners, while Thomas W. Lawson's famous bulldog, Dreamwold Blunderbuss, took several prizes.

The Knight Motor Best

Poppet Valve Motor in official test falls far below the Knight record

This is the story of two 38 horsepower automobile engines—one a six-cylinder poppet valve motor of 1913 design, and the other a four cylinder Knight sleeve valve motor built in 1909—four years ago.

The poppet valve motor was tested by the Automobile Club of America—the Knight by the Royal Automobile Club of England.

The poppet valve motor was under observation 300 hours—the Knight for 320 hours.

The maximum power of the poppet valve was 44.9—the Knight 59.

The minimum power of the poppet valve was 28.7—the Knight 51.

At the end of the tests the poppet valve motor was found to be delivering less power than at the beginning, while the Knight showed considerably more.

During the test of the poppet valve engine, valves were twice adjusted when the power fell off—during the test of the Knight motor no adjustments to the mechanism were made at any time.

It is conceded that the poppet valve motor which was thus tested is one of the most highly developed poppet valve engines manufactured; that the test was conducted by the Automobile Club of America is proof that it was accurate. Hence the superiority of the Knight type motor has been proven by the poppet valve itself, and again supports the statement that—

The Stearns-Knight "Four" is better than any poppet valve "Six," and that—

The only car better than the Stearns-Knight "Four" is the Stearns-Knight "Six."

The most sensational feature of the 500-mile Indianapolis Decoration Day race was the performance of a 25 H.P. Knight-motored car, which, although by far the smallest car in the contest, ran consistently throughout, averaging nearly 70 miles an hour, and did not take oil or water from start to finish. It defeated 19 high-powered foreign and American machines, and finished fifth behind cars of far greater power.

DENOUNCE PARTY TRAITORS IN NEW HAVEN GRAB

Rumors of Scandal in Merger Vote Arouse Democrat Leaders Throughout the State.

th Hays of Brighton and Representative Robert Washburn of Worcester opposed the motion for a continuance. Representative Hays said:

"There is no reason for delaying this matter. WE ALL KNOW HOW WE'RE GOING TO VOTE. DEBATE WILL NOT CHANGE A SINGLE VOTE. We should not only refuse to postpone consideration of the veto, but we should limit debate on it."

After ten minutes' debate on the motion to postpone, it was defeated by a voice vote, and debate on the veto was begun.

Means Monopoly, Says Haines

Representative Haines in debate urged that the bill be defeated. He said:

"The New Haven in this bill is asking the Legislature to give it an absolute monopoly of all transportation facilities in Massachusetts. We are all in sympathy with the needs of Western Massachusetts, but we cannot afford to give up the whole State to the monopoly, in return for a few trolley lines.

"This bill will mean watered stock and inflated values. It is dangerous. Those who favor it—favor monopoly.

The House was astonished, when Representatives George P. Webster of Boxford, the Bull Moose floor leader, and Nathan H. Burdick of Adams, a Democrat, both of whom originally voted against the bill, took the floor and declared that they would change their position and vote to pass the bill over the Governor's veto.

This unexpected flop on the part of the Bull Moose leader and the Democrat member caused a stir in the House. Members speculated as to the reasons for the change of heart in the two members.

Representative Webster said:

"We are not monopoly. It is already established. The day of competition has gone by. Our next step should be to regulate and control monopoly. The next step after that, I believe, is public ownership.

"The action which the House takes today on this bill and the action that it has taken upon various other transportation measures are tremendous steps in the direction of that ultimate solution, which I believe to be a desirable one, namely, public ownership.

Issue Bigger Than New Haven.

"With the criticisms of the New Haven I am in hearty accord. I have attacked that corporation in every part of the Commonwealth. But on this measure the New Haven is not the issue. The question is whether we should give

"Sustain Foss Veto," Cry of Those Who Believe in Honesty and Platform Pledges.

Western Massachusetts the transportation facilities which it so badly needs.

Representative Burdick said:

"For two years I have stood practically alone among the members of the Western Massachusetts delegation of the House against this bill. I have always felt that regardless of what the apparent wishes of the people of Western Massachusetts were in this matter, I should follow my own judgment, which was that this was a bad proposition.

"But today I have come to believe that I had no right to stand out against the wishes of my constituency in Western Massachusetts, and, therefore, I shall waive my own opinion in the matter and vote to give Western Massachusetts what it demands."

No bill before the Legislature—not even the Washburn Railroad bill, which the New Haven has fixed up and made its pet measure—has attracted such a storm of discussion as this trolley bill. The two parties in their platforms were definitely aligned on the question, and the Democratic platform opposed the bill.

Democratic legislators realize this. At the State House today rumors were afloat that the legislative leader had legislator had said: "No, sir; we will not violate our party pledge, and our promise to our constituents—unless, of course, it is 'made worth while.'"

Talk of Investigation.

It was generally understood that mere promises of more campaign support next Fall would not suffice to bring into line those "representatives of the people." They declared they must have the "real goods."

So common was talk of this sort that legislators were on the point of demanding an inquiry by the General Court into the methods used in winning Democratic votes for the bill. There was talk also of a searching Grand Jury investigation. The real Democratic leaders in the House—the men who have helped carry their party to its present strong position in the State—when only a few years ago its railroad friends had wrecked it—warned the revolutionists today that the State and the party is watching them. They were warned that investigation, disgrace and possibly prison stripes may very well follow a too great susceptibility to "influence."

As a matter of fact, the leaders do not believe the New Haven is banking life or death on this Trolley Merger Bill. They believe it was brought forth simply as a "striking horse"—a scarecrow to be used for vote swapping purposes in the fight for the Washburn bill. The New Haven, the leaders say, have taken the Washburn bill and with a single stroke have changed it so that its original author declared he would disown it and call it the "New Haven Bill" instead.

Duty of Democrats Plain

In order to secure expressions of opinion from the men throughout the State who have showed by their careers that they know the principles upon which political success must stand, the AMERICAN addressed to these leaders individually the following statement:

The last Democratic platform confirmed Governor Foss' last year's veto of the so-called Trolley Merger bill, handing over the Western street railways to the New Haven Railroad, and also declared against the policy of the control of street railways by steam roads in these words:

We are opposed to the ownership or control of the street railways by the steam railroads and believe that it should go no farther in this Commonwealth.

Governor Foss has again vetoed this Trolley Merger bill.

Is it not the plain duty of the Democrats in the Legislature to support the Governor's veto?

Can a political party prosper in these days whose representatives do not recognize the obligations of the party platform?

Here are the replies received thus far:

JAMES E. O'DONNELL, Mayor of Lowell:

"In my opinion no political organization can go back on its promises or violate its pledges to the public and be successful. As Lafollette says, it makes a promise is considered dishonorable if he violates that promise. Why does not the same judgment apply to a body of men as well as to an individual?

I believe that an individual or an organization ought to be slow in making promises, but that when they are made they should be kept. This is the only way in which a party can hold the confidence of the people.

"Stand by the Governor."

J. EDWARD BARRY, Mayor of Cambridge:

The Democrats should stand by Governor Foss when he is right, in accordance with the Democratic platform.

The party's members must be progressive and true to the people all the time.

MICHAEL A. SCANLON, Mayor of Lawrence:

I believe that street railways and steam railroads should be distinct corporations. I do not believe in mergers. I am emphatically in favor of the legislators upholding Governor Foss' veto.

Defeat the Trolley Merger

Here is what the public authorities say about the Trolley Merger Bill, which permits the New Haven Railroad to grab the street railways in more than half of Massachusetts. One more step would give this railroad a COMPLETE TRANSPORTATION monopoly in ALL the State, with all it means to the welfare of the people.

The last Democratic State Convention made this declaration binding upon every Democrat in the Legislature.

"WE ARE OPPOSED TO THE OWNERSHIP OR CONTROL OF OUR STREET RAILWAYS BY STEAM RAILROADS AND WE BELIEVE THAT IT SHOULD GO NO FARTHER IN THIS COMMONWEALTH."

The Railroad Commission says: "We are fully appraised of the tendency of great enterprises to consolidate, but are of opinion that no sound demand exists in Massachusetts for legislation permitting all its transportation interests to become vested ultimately in the hands of a single corporate agency. Massachusetts, in our opinion, is not prepared at this time for a policy that results in this method of control. Experience repeatedly demonstrates that in the field of transportation, as well as in other fields of public service, competition, when not wasteful, may be wise."

The Chamber of Commerce says:

"We recommend that our railroads be given no power to acquire trolley lines in Massachusetts."

What the Governor says:

"This act is the last of a series of measures conceived in the interest of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Company, by which it has been sought to break down the established laws and policy of this Commonwealth. It purports to provide better transportation facilities for western Massachusetts, but in fact has been skilfully drafted in such manner as to legalize unlawful acts hitherto committed by the railroad company without giving any satisfactory assurance that the transportation facilities needed in western Massachusetts will ever be provided."

Tax Commissioner Trefry says:

"The creating of holding companies and the broadening of securities held by them is, in my opinion, unwise and unwarranted."

The Secretary of the Public Franchise League, Joseph B. Eastman, says:

"The Western Trolleys Bill gives several hundred miles of trolley line in this State to a railroad which has not handled efficiently the properties which it now controls. It permits the railroad to buy control of these trolley lines at any price it cares to pay without public supervision, although the chief cause of the New Haven's impaired financial condition has been just such loose, unsupervised transactions. It strikes a further blow at competition in transportation in this Commonwealth and means a long step toward the complete elimination of such competition. It requires the railroad, in its weakened financial condition, to spend $5,000,000 on experimental and unprofitable new lines when millions are urgently needed for the maintenance and improvement of its present facilities. Governor Foss has done well to veto the bill."

CHILD LABOR PROBE REPORT EXPECTED SOON

The question of whether there shall be a State-wide legislative investigation of child labor conditions in Massachusetts is now in the hands of the Republican members of the House Committee on Rules, composed, of Speaker Cushing and the leading Republican and Democratic members of the lower branch. The two Democratic members of the committee, Representatives John F. Meaney of Blackstone and Michael J. McKittrick of Boston, are in favor of the investigation. The full committee is expected to make a report today or tomorrow.

Prominent legislators, members of the three leading parties, and representatives of organized labor, appeared before the committee yesterday and urged the passage of Representative Benjamin F. Sullivan's order for a legislative investigation, the purpose of which is to wipe out all the child labor evils that exist in the Commonwealth. There was no opposition. More than sixty members of the House were recorded in favor of the measure.

The proposed investigation is sweeping in its scope, providing for the appointment of a committee of nine members of the House to sit during the recess and probe conditions under which women and minors are employed in the various industries and occupations of the State, with power to summon witnesses, compel the production of books, papers and documents and to administer oaths. The committee is also required to ascertain whether any of the present laws are being evaded, and, if so, how further evasions can be prevented.

In arguing for the order, Representative Sullivan said: "Children are being employed in this Commonwealth in violation or evasion of existing laws. The same is true with regard to women. The only way to remedy this evil is by making no investigation to determine where and how these evasions are practiced and how they can be prevented."

Henry Sterling and Cornelius J. Carmody of the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, also urged a legislative investigation.

New Beauty Treatment for Arms and Hands

Cosmetics and lotions are now displaced by the best beauty-bath treatment for hands and arms, which works really marvelous results in a very short time, overcoming as it does the red, rough, unlovely condition by banishing tan, freckles, liver spots, "water marks" and other blemishes. This beauty-bath is inexpensive and takes little time—merely wash the hands and arms well, then dry, after which bathe them for a few minutes right and morning in a quart of warm water to which is added a scant teaspoonful pulverized ammol. Allow this to dry slowly on the skin.

The result of these beauty-baths is truly astonishing. The skin acquires a satiny softness and shell-like transparency, rivaling in whiteness and dainty texture even those of a healthy maidenhood. A 4-ounce package of ammol, while costing but little, will last for quite a while.

BRITISH MINISTRY EVADES ISSUE ON THE RELEASE OF SPY GRAVES FROM PRISON

LONDON, June 12.—The British ministry faced a storm of questions in open commons on the reasons for the secret release of the convicted German spy, Armgaard Karl Graves—and evaded the issue.

Speaking for the government, McKinnon Wood, secretary for Scotland, admitted briefly that Graves was released last December and then took refuge in the statement:

"It is not in accordance with precedent to state reasons for the exercise of the royal prerogative."

A storm arose. Half a dozen members were on their feet demanding an explicit reply. Joseph King, a member of the government party, took his political future in his hands by joining the opposition, insisting upon the entire scandal being cleared up. Getting no satisfactory reply, he served notice of his intention to put down additional questions which must be answered next Monday. Other members indicated a like intention.

Meanwhile the pointed questions with Sir Gilbert Parker has asked will come up in the regular order today. McKinnon Wood, as well as all the other members of the cabinet, are to be given no rest until they have cleared up what was declared today to be one of the gravest scandals of the public service with which the Parliament has ever had to deal.

The entire nation has been stirred up over the affair, as was evidenced in the House of Commons yesterday. Joseph King and Captain Walter Faber, Unionist members for North Somerset, led the heckling, and will be followed by Sir Gilbert Parker, who will keep the issue alive until next Monday, when Mr. King will again go at the ministry for a full explanation of the situation.

These three members, it is understood, have been deputed by their fellow members to carry forward the work of forcing the government to make a full explanation. That Mr. King left his party ranks to join in the public probing is an indication of the public mind.

The questions open up the entire question of Graves' release and his subsequent actions.

Sir Gilbert Parker said today:

"The whole business is very delicate and yet very simple. Graves is either lying or he is not. He was a man who was going to be used again by the British government or he was not. Now, if he was exploited by the British government it is certain that the British government played fair with him. It is unintelligible that a government is going to play false with its secret agents. The power of its secret service depends upon it keeping its obligations literally and liberally. This, to my view, is the evidence that the man is stating what is not true, because it would not be for the interests of the British government to alienate any secret service agent that it could use.

and so enable him to give anything away."

GRAVES REFUTES EXPLANATION BY GREAT BRITAIN

NEW YORK, June 12.—"I was not released because of my health," said Dr. Graves today, when shown the cable reports of the debate over his release and revelations in the House of Commons.

"I have given the reasons for my release—I was to enter the British secret service, which I did. Mr. E. Robinson arranged for it, and I served Great Britain in the manner which I have indicated. If McKinnon Wood will answer Mr. King's question on Monday, he will admit all I have said is true. He knows the facts.

"I am glad, however, that they admit I was released. The rest will come out gradually.

"It will not do any good for British officials to attack my motives. Sir Gilbert Parker says Great Britain acted in good faith with me. He ought to know any more about that than he does about the circumstances attending my release. Let my friends over there decide whether they will tell the truth now or ask for additional proofs.

"Just this much more: Two gentlemen accosted me in front of Hector's today and asked if I was not Mr. Snell. I truthfully told them I was not. Snell died yesterday at the cable office when I got his cable dispatches to 'Bunting.' They said if I was Snell they would make it worth my while, as they were newspapermen. Maybe they were.

"But it is not worth my while any longer to be Snell. And I think I have seen those two newspaper fellows before —but not doing newspaper work. To them I wish to say I have changed my address."

Say That Sea Once Covered Illinois

WASHINGTON, June 12.—That Illinois was at one time covered by the sea, that a glacial period followed and that later the territory was a vast swamp, is the substance of a report of the geological survey issued here today. The coal underlying Illinois is the result of partial decomposition of subsequent crystallization of the luxuriant vegetation which flourished. The beds of ancient lakes have been discovered. Now they are merely dry valleys with streams running through them.

Find No Outlet to Morgan's Tunnel

COLUMBUS, O., June 12.—The question, "Did General John H. Morgan, the Confederate raider, tunnel his way out of a cell in the Ohio Penitentiary while a prisoner of war, or did his guards allow him to escape?" a subject of wide discussion since the Civil War, has not been settled by hearing given to the cell in which General Morgan was held. The explorations so far conducted fail to show that the tunnel had any outlet.

Motion Pictures Delight the Pope

ROME, June 12.—A motion picture machine was set up in the Consistorial Hall at the Vatican, and Pope Pius X., surrounded by his sisters and niece and Vatican dignitaries, enjoyed a view of many interesting scenes. He watched the passing show with animation and called attention to the progress of science, which permitted the unfolding of the wonders of the world before even a prisoner like himself.

"Wireless Wizard" and Wife Arrive

Marconi Expects to Conquer Atlantic, with Sea Girt Radio Station.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Mrs. Guglielmo, wife of "the wireless wizard," arrived on the Olympic, accompanying her husband on a trip to America for the first time in two years. She said she was delighted to visit America again. Marconi comes to overlook the construction of the new wireless station at Sea girt, N. J., which will be the largest in the world. From this station messages will be transported direct to Wales, more than three thousand miles. "When this is accomplished," declared Marconi, "we will have conquered the Atlantic."

WOMAN JURY PLANS TO TRY JUDGE COOPER

CHICAGO, June 12.—Next Saturday afternoon Chicago women will open one of the most remarkable proceedings in the history of the city.

They will sit in judgment upon Judge William Fenimore Cooper, charged with having been partial to men in cases involving charges made by women and girls.

The women have organized an actual court, and they believe the verdict of the court, while it will have no official force, will serve to exonerate Judge Cooper absolutely—or else drive him from the bench.

Cooper is the judge who fined a man with a bad record $5 for attacking a schoolgirl.

The court, organized with judge, clerk, bailiffs, jury and lawyers, all women, will convene at 2 o'clock, and solemnly and impartially try Judge Cooper to determine whether or not the women, especially the mothers of Chicago, can rest secure that the sanctity of their homes is to be safeguarded while he is on the bench.

Seek Use of Courtroom.

The trial, if possible, will be held in a courtroom, as the organization the women have made could be best accommodated and would be most appropriate in a courtroom. If not obtainable, some central hall will be selected where the public will be admitted to hear the array of witnesses that will appear.

The judge of the court will be Mrs. Minona S. Jones. The jury which will try the case of the Mothers vs. Cooper, will be Mrs. F. H. Greene, Dr. Lillian Thompson, Mrs. J. E. Stewart, Miss Belle Squire, Mrs. Elmo Parker, Mrs. Edward Mueller, Mrs. Max Pollachek, Mrs. Freeman E. Brown, Mrs. Larkin Mead, Mrs. Lena Roche, Mrs. Marie McKee, Miss M. Antoine Stanley, Mrs. John L. Wood, Mrs. Phillip Bernard and Mrs. Esther Falkenstein.

Attorney Not Selected.

The selection of the prosecuting attorney has not been made. The majority of the committee seemed to be in favor of Mrs. Antoinette Funk, one of the most prominent members of the Cook County bar and a leader in the Progressive party. Besides Mrs. Funk, Mary Miller, Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch, Marion Drake and Nettie Cutlin were considered.

Mrs. Jones said that the trial would be as fair as it was possible to make it.

ELIZABETH M. CUMMINGS, the eighteen-year-old Malden girl, in connection with whose death Wilfred L. Pheeney has been arrested.

Arrest Is Made in Girl's Death Case

Wilfred K. Pheeney, Malden Roofer, Taken on Indictment Warrant.

Wilfred K. Pheeney, twenty-eight years old, head of the firm of W. K. Pheeney & Company, roofers, of No. 401 Main street, Malden, was arrested today on the charge of aiding abortion in the case of Elizabeth M. Cummings, eighteen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Cummings of No. 188 Cross street, Malden, who died last February as a result of an operation. Authorities questioned Pheeney, who was a witness at the inquest, about the case, and the indictment resulted.

ASSASSINATION IN TURKEY MAY CAUSE REVOLT

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 12.—While Europe patrolled the streets to prevent rioting, the body of Mahmud Shevket Pasha, grand vizier of Turkey, who was assassinated with his military aid outside of the Sublime Porte, was buried today with all the rites of Moslem faith.

Over twenty arrests were made throughout the night and today, the majority of the prisoners being soldiers. Most of them are members of the anti-Young Turk party, which the late Nazim Pasha was military commander-in-chief, most very young. It is now regarded as a certainty that Turkish reactionaries committed the murder, in revenge for the killing of Nazim Pasha by Young Turks last Winter. Turkey is left without a leader at a critical moment. It has long been recognized that Mahmud Shevket Pasha was the iron power behind the throne, and that while Mehmed V. the Sultan, was the nominal head of the government, the fiery young Turkish Grand Vizier exercised all the authority of a military dictator.

WITHIN THE LAW

By Marvin Dana, from the Play of Bayard Veiller

[Copyright, 1912, by the M. K. Fit Company. Within the Law is copyrighted by Mr. Veiller and the presentation of it is published by the permission of The American Play Company, to whom application for the exclusive rights of the production and performance of "Within the Law" in all languages.]

It was his abhorrence of treachery among pals that had driven him to the murder of the stool-pigeon in a fit of ungovernable passion. He might have stayed his hand then, but for the gusty rage that swept him on to the crime. None the less, had he spared the man, his hatred of the betrayer would have been the same. And the other virtue of Joe Garson was the complement of this—his own loyalty, a loyalty that made him forget self utterly where he loved. The one woman who had ever filled his heart was Mary, and for her his life were not too much to give.

FROZEN WITH HORROR

The suddenness of it all held Mary voiceless for long seconds. She was frozen with horror of the event. When, at last, words came, they were a frantic purge of protest.

"No, Joe! No! Don't talk—don't think!"

Burke, immensely gratified, went mutely to his chair, and thence surveyed the agitated group with grisly pleasure.

"Joe has talked, he said, significantly.

Mary, shaken as she was by the fact of Garson's confession, nevertheless retained her presence of mind sufficiently to resist with all her strength.

"He did it to protect me," she stated, earnestly.

The Inspector disdained such futile argument. As the doorman appeared in answer to the bonzer, he directed that the stenographer be summoned at once.

"We'll have the confession in due form," he remarked, gazing pleasantly on the three before him.

"He's not going to confess," Mary insisted, with spirit.

But Burke was not in the least impressed. He disregarded her completely, and spoke mechanically to Garson the formal warning required by the law.

"You are hereby cautioned that anything you say may be used against you." Then, as the stenographer entered, he went on with direly interest. "Now, Joe."

Yet once again, Mary protested, a little wildly.

"Don't speak, Joe! Don't say a word till we can get a lawyer for you!"

The man met her pleading eyes steadily, and shook his head in refusal.

"It's no use, my girl," Burke broke in, harshly. "I told you I'd get you. I'm going to try you and Garson, and the whole gang for murder—yes, every one of you. And you, Gilder," he continued, lowering on the young man who had defied him so obstinately, "you'll go to the House of Detention as a material witness." He turned his gaze to Garson again, and spoke authoritatively. "Come on now, Joe!"

Garson took a step toward the desk, and spoke decisively.

"If I come through, you'll let her go —and him?" he added as an afterthought, with a nod toward Dick Gilder.

"Oh, Joe, don't!" Mary cried, bitterly. "We'll spend every dollar we can raise to save you!"

"Now, it's no use," the Inspector complained. "You're only wasting time. He's said that he did it. That's all there is to it. Now that we're sure he's our man, he hasn't got a chance in the world."

"Well, how about it?" Garson demanded, savagely. "Do they go clear if I come through?"

"We'll get the best lawyers in the country," Mary promised, desperately. "We'll save you, Joe—we'll save you."

Garson regarded the distraught girl with skeptical eyes. But there was no trace of yielding in his voice as he replied, though he spoke sorrowfully.

"No, you can't help me," he said simply. "My time has come, Mary . . . And I can save you a lot of trouble."

"He's right there," Burke calculated. "We've got him cold. So, what's the use of dragging you two into it?"

"Then, they go clear?" Garson exclaimed, eagerly. "They ain't even to be called as witnesses?"

Burke nodded assent.

"You're on!" he agreed.

"Then, here goes!" Garson cried, and he looked expectantly toward the stenographer.

HOW HE DID IT

The strain of it all was sapping the will of the girl, who saw the man she so highly esteemed for his service to her and his devotion about to condemn himself to death. She grew half-hysterical, her words came confusedly:

"No, Joe! No, no, no!"

"There's no other way out," he declared sensibly. "I'm going through with it." He straightened a little, and again leered at the stenographer. His voice became quietly, without any ecstatic emotion.

"My name is Joe Garson."

"Aliases?" Burke suggested.

"Alias nothing!" came the sharp retort. "Garson's my monaker. I shot English Eddie, because he was a skunk, and a stool-pigeon, and he got just what was coming to him." Triumphation beyond the mere words beat in his voice now.

Burke twisted uneasily in his chair.

"Now, now!" he objected, severely. "We can't take a confession like that."

Garson shook his head—spoke with fiercer hatred.

"Because he was a skunk, and a stool-pigeon," he repeated. "Have you got it?" And then, as the stenographer nodded assent, he went on, less violently: "I croaked him just as he was going to call the bulls with a police-whistle. I used a gun with smokeless powder. It had a Maxim silencer on it, so that it didn't make any noise."

A CROOK'S PRIDE.

Garson paused, and the set despair of his features lightened a little. Into his voice came a tone of exultation indescribably ghastly. It was born of the eternal egotism of the criminal, fattening vanity in gloating over his ingenuity for evil. Garson, despite all his two great virtues, had the vices of his class. Now, he stared at Burke with a quizzical grin creasing his lips.

"Say," he exclaimed, "I'll bet it's the first time a guy was ever croaked with one of them things! Ain't it?"

The Inspector nodded affirmation. There was sincere admiration in his expression, for he was ready at all times to respect the personal abilities of the criminals against whom he waged relentless war.

"That's right, Joe," he said, with perceptible enthusiasm.

"Some class to that, eh?" Garson demanded, still with that gruesome air of boasting. "I got the gun, and the Maxim-silencer thing off a fence in Boston," he explained. "Say, that thing cost me sixty dollars, and it's worth every cent of the money. . . . Why, they'll remember me as the first to spring one of them things, won't they?"

"They sure will, Joe!" the Inspector conceded.

At the words, Mary started, and her lips moved as if she were about to speak. Garson, intent on her always, though he seemed to look only at Burke, observed the effect on her, and repeated his words swiftly, with a warning emphasis that gave the girl pause.

"Nobody knew I had it—nobody in the world!" he declared. "And nobody said anything to do with the killing but me."

Burke put a question that was troubling him much, concerning the motive that lay behind the shooting of Grigge.

"Was there any bad feeling between you and Eddie Grigge?"

Garson's reply was explicit.

"Never till that very minute. Then, I learned the truth about what he'd framed up with you." The speaker's voice reverted to its former fierceness in recollection of the treachery of one whom he had trusted.

"He was a stool-pigeon, and I hated him! That's all," he continued, with brutal candor.

The Inspector moved restlessly in his chair. He had only detestation for the slain man, yet there was something morbidly distasteful in the thought that he himself had contrived the situation which had resulted in the murder of his confederate. It was only by an effort that he shook off the vague feeling of guilt.

"Nothing else to say?" he inquired.

Garson reflected for a few seconds, then made a gesture of negation.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

BOARD TO OPEN FRISCO INQUIRY NEXT MONDAY

WASHINGTON, June 12.—A complete and searching investigation of the affairs of the St. Louis & San Francisco railroad, its absorption of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois and the receivership of the Frisco road will be ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission at its next conference next Monday.

Chairman Clark of the commission today stated that as yet no action has been taken by the commission in response to the Kenyon resolution passed by the Senate Tuesday.

On Monday, he said, the commission will discuss the matter, and the congressional resolution asking for an investigation will be read at this meeting.

"I think that the commission will send about eight men to various places," said Commissioner Clark, "to obtain the facts connected with the troubles of the Frisco road. Further action by the commission of course will depend on the results obtained by these men."

CIRCUIT COURT JUDGE BINGHAM IS SWORN IN

The hearing of the United Shoe Machinery case in the Federal Court was interrupted today for some ten minutes because of the ceremony of administering the oath of office to George Hutchins Bingham, recently appointed by President Wilson as Judge of the First Circuit Court. Seated on the Bench during the ceremony were Judges Putnam and Dodge of the Circuit Court and Judges Brown, Aldrich, Hale and Morton of the United States District Court.

The new judge, without a robe, was seated in a chair below the bench.

Francis Fogarty, clerk of the United States Circuit Court, read the commission which was signed by Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States.

The oath was next read by Clerk Fogarty, in the name of Judge Putnam. All the judges remained standing during the reading.

When Clerk Fogarty had finished, the oath was signed by Judge Bingham.

Then the court withdrew to the lobby, where the judges greeted their latest associate.

Afterwards Judge Bingham joined Judge Morton and went with him to the district court room, where routine business was in progress.

The last judge to be inducted into office in the Federal Court was Judge Dodge, when Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, who happened that day to be in Boston, presided.

Cincinnati, June 12.—Manager Stallings and his band of Boston Pilgrims arrived in this city today to open a four-game series with Joe Tinker's eighth position Reds.

The Boston boys came to town in happy spirits over winning yesterday down in St. Louis and all expressed themselves confident of winning a majority of the games and make the gap between seventh and eighth places much wider.

This is Manager Stallings first visit to this city as a Boston manager and he hopes to make it a good visit. The Reds are none too troublesome this season and with Bill James, Dick Rudolph and Walter Dickson waiting for a turn to pitch, Boston chances are more than bright. Suggs may pitch for the Reds today.

The Pilgrims wound up the series with the Cardinals yesterday by pulling out a 6 to 3 victory by playing some good baseball and showing much speed.

Leonard Blamed for Sox Defeat in Great Battle

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

By all odds the best game of ball played in Boston in a long, long time was the last game of the series between the Red Sox and the Cleveland team. It is true our fellows lost after a battle royal lasting fifteen innings, but that's all right. The visitors deserved to win when they pulled off that steal home in the last inning and the Red Sox deserved to lose by the same token.

Dutch Leonard was the man to blame for the fatal steal (made by Olson), for with the bases choked and two out he took time enough in winding up to wind up an eight-day grandfather's clock. Earlier in the game Chapman tried to sneak over a run by the same trick, but Leonard happened to pitch a perfect ball to Carrigan, and as Lajoie, who was at bat, offered Chapman no aid, the runner was a somewhat easy out.

Leonard Pitched Great Game.

Leonard pitched a remarkably fine game, except for his slip up in the last inning and he is more to be pitied than censured. Dutch pitched a full game of nine innings, although he did not start in until the seventh round. Before that Joe Wood had been severely maltreated by the visitors and was forced to retire at the end of the third. Charlie Hall, the Sea Lion, took his place and in the three innings he pitched the Clevelands did not get a hit off him. He made way in the last of the sixth, when, in a batting rally Carrigan went in to bat for him. It was a fortunate move for Bill delivered with a swat that landed on the bank-ing in left field and put the Red Sox right in the running.

The visitors started right in on Joe the very first inning. With two down, Olson cracked a three-bagger to right and scored on Jackson's double to left. In the second, with two down, Graney hit savagely for two bases, but was left on second. It was in the third that Smoky Joe was made to look like a counterfeit. He began by striking out Gregg. Then he passed Johnson.

Five Runs for Naps.

Chapman came through with a triple between Hooper and Speaker. Olson slashed a line single to right. Jackson fanned and then Larry was soaked with a pitched ball. Ryan came to the front with a single to left. The fun might have continued indefinitely if Ryan had not been caught off first after rounding the bag on his safe hit.

All these things gave Cleveland a lead of five runs and it looked all up for the Red Sox as Gregg was pitching fine ball. But you never can tell. In the sixth the home team had his turn and Mr. Gregg had a very bad inning himself. Yerkes started the fun with a safety to left. Speaker drew a pass. Lewis filled the bases with a hot one which Lajoie knocked down, but couldn't field.

A base on balls to Larry Gardner sent Yerkes over the pan and the bases were still full with no one out. Engle popped a fly to Lajoie for the first out. Wagner got four bad ones and Speaker was forced in with the second run. Cady drove a long fly to Jackson on which Lewis pulled and then Carrigan, batting for Hall, planted the ball on the left field bunking for a double, scoring Gardner and Wagner. Hooper made the third out when he whiffed.

These five runs were all the Red Sox got although they had chances to nearly every inning that succeeded. Not eight rounds both teams went along without scoring. There were all kinds of brilliant plays, perhaps the best being a fine stop of a hot grounder by Engle off Graney in the fourteenth inning.

Olson Wins for Naps.

Finally came the fifteenth inning. Turner led off by sending up a fly to Speaker. Leonard grew wild and passed Olson and it proved to be his undoing. Jackson came along with a single that Wagner knocked down. After a long consultation, Lajoie was purposely passed. This filled the bases. Ryan then pooped up a little fly to Leonard, making two out. While Leonard was winding up, Olson stole home. Graney was passed. Then Grover Land pasted the ball to left, scoring two more runs and got around to third himself when Graney was caught napping off third, but Gardner's slow throw to the plate allowed Graney to make the fourth run. Land also stole home on Leonard, but unfortunately for him he did it on Gregg's third strike and the run didn't count.

The Red Sox went out in order in their half of the fifteenth, but it was a fine ball game just the same.

Schreck "Comes Back."

CINCINNATI, June 12.—Mike Schreck, the Reading, O., heavyweight, "comes back" and outpointed Billy Sparks in a fifteen-round contest. Sparks has been fighting in New York and Philadelphia under the name of Billy Ryan.

GENUINE SCHUBERT'S 5¢ SMOKERS

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

JAKE STAHL had an attack of "cold feet" in the fourteenth inning that cost him what chance he had to win that long, long fifteen-inning struggle that ended the Cleveland series. With the score standing five all, he had three men "on" with two out. Leonard was up. Here was the place to take a chance with a pinch hitter. But Stahl either had no confidence in his pinch hitters or no confidence in his pitching reserves, for he allowed Leonard to bat. Leonard struck out.

* * *

IN the next inning Leonard gave the Naps four runs and the game. None of the reserves would have done worse. So that emphasizes the failure to use the pinch hitter.

Stahl had two guesses as to what Leonard might do in the fifteenth, as it happens, he guessed wrong and it's easier for us to criticise, knowing what happened, than it was for Jake to guess, not knowing what would happen.

The point is not so much Stahl's wrong guess as to what his pitcher would do if he kept him in as it is the conditions which kept him from using a pinch batter in the fourteenth. It's a good bet Johnny McGraw would have removed Meiry, or Marquard, or Tesreau, or any of those fellows in such an emergency.

It's another good bet that the Sox are finding it mighty tough going when there's nobody that can be depended upon with sufficient confidence for at least an attempt in such an emergency.

* * *

THE British losers in the first international polo match and the Australian losers in the Davis tennis cup match gave the American pugilist a good example. They neither excused their defeats, claimed foul play nor abused the winners and officials. They beat us by playing better tennis than we did," said Captain Shirley Doust of the Australians. "The best team won Tuesday," said Captain Ritson of the Britons.

* * *

THE American team which beat the Australians settled today for England, where they will meet the German team which beat the French in the Continental preliminary. They will practice tennis all the way across sea and expect to find the Germans somewhat easier than the Australians were. The Australians also sailed today, on the Baltic. They will play in the All-England tournament at Wimbledon, June 23.

* * *

THE British newspapers made a big plunge on the first of the international polo games. All of them published a column to two and a half columns yesterday, the Times featuring it for the maximum space.

The interest in this country, where polo has never been taken so seriously by the public generally, was astonishing. The newspapers devoted pages to Tuesday's game. Crowds watched the bulletin boards and cheered like mad when the Yankees —who had not seemed to have a chance—were announced winners.

More persons called the sporting department of the Boston AMERICAN for information about the polo game than for the baseball scores—which is going some.

The regular sporting extra of the AMERICAN, which is published at 6:30 p. m., was on the street three minutes after the game was published with a complete story of the contest telegraphed, as it progressed, directly from the Meadowbrook grounds on Long Island. This edition was in demand everywhere.

* * *

THE American and British teams will clash again Saturday afternoon, and it is probable that the second game will attract more attention than the first one. If the Americans win they keep the cup. If the British beat the Yankees, a third game will have to be played, the date to be decided by the contesting teams.

* * *

IT was the unanimous opinion, both in this country and in England, that sheer Yankee grit and pure Yankee spirit won the first game. Before the contest the Americans were considered outclassed in the science of play and in individual skill and strength. But they waded right in and, "getting the jump" on the Englishmen, who had expected a swifter opening, so surprised their opponents that Captain Ritson's team was demoralized. By the time they recovered their balance the Americans had a commanding lead and were never headed.

HARRY WHITNEY YET TO SELECT FOURTH PLAYER

NEW YORK, June 12.—The defenders of the America cup have a serious problem before them in deciding upon the team that will go on the field against the Englishmen next Saturday in the second of the international polo matches.

The selection of the extra man for the American team is entirely up to Harry Payne Whitney, and any man that he picks will be agreeable to the polo association.

Today Whitney was undecided whether to call on L. E. Stoddard or Rene La Montagne. If Stoddard is life final choice he will go in at No. 1, with Larry Waterbury at No. 2, the position that Monte Waterbury was playing when he was compelled to retire with a badly broken finger.

CHAMPIONS' BATTLE BROWNS IN FIRST CONTEST TODAY

BROWNS OPEN SERIES WITH SOX TODAY

The St. Louis Browns came to town today and Hugoe slong for a four-game series. After the strenuous sessions with the White Sox and the Naps, the lowly tribe of Stovall ought to be easy picking for the Red Sox, who have got back that old never-say-die spirit, as was well shown in yesterday's game when they came back with a five-run rally and forced a game to fifteen innings before finally biting the dust.

The Browns, however, are apt to be rather cocky over the fact that yesterday they brought to a summary end the long winning streak of the Athletics.

Sisler will probably pick "Buck" O'Brien, who has had the longest lay-off he has enjoyed for many a moon.

Irvin S. Cobb on the Humorous Side of Polo Will Be a Big Feature in Sunday's American Irvin S. Cobb is today one of the real big figures of American literature. Many people half him as the greatest living humorist, and the legitimate successor of Mark Twain.

Certain it is that the Kentuckian has been the sensation of the literary world since he flashed into view a few short years ago, and he is turning out, along with his more serious efforts, the funniest stuff now being written in this country.

All of which is preliminary to an important announcement.

The Boston AMERICAN has indured Cobb to cover the second game of the great international polo contest between England and America at Meadow Brook on Saturday afternoon.

The AMERICAN is as curious as you are to see how the game looks to a humorist, and in satisfying that curiosity, we naturally went after the prize humorist of them all.

Cobb is at this moment honored at Croton-on-Hudson, New York, in company with Ravard Vetter author of "Within the Law," and the two are perpetrating a dramatization of Cobb's "Judge Priest" stories; but the creator of the "Back Home" folks, and of "Cobb's Anatomy," has agreed to abandon the "drammer" for just one day.

It is the first newspaper assignment that Cobb has undertaken since his sensational rise to literary fame, and the AMERICAN feels pretty safe in guaranteeing the readers of the Sunday morning issue the "laugh-

Special Meeting for New England League

A special meeting may be called of the New England League owners to take action on the conduct of John Clohecy of the Fall River team, who assaulted Umpire O'Brien in the Fall River-Portland game at Fall River last Tuesday.

Clohecy has been a troublemaker in the New England League controversy and it is the wish of some of the owners to rid the league of him. Last Tuesday Clohecy went out on the field and when O'Brien's back was turned he hit the umpire in the eye, severely bruising the optic.

Dabney's Defeat Is Big Surprise

A surprise came during the third round of the Massachusetts State tennis championship at the Longwood Cricket Club, Brookline, when A. S. Dabney was defeated in two straight sets by H. C. Johnson, 6—2, 6—3. Another match of interest was the last one of the day between Irving C. Wright and P. H. Harris, the former winning, 4—6, 6—2, 6—1.

W. H. Abbott lost to D. S. Niles, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4. Considerable interest among followers of tennis was also centered in this match.

STAR ATHLETES CLASH IN BIG TRACK GAMES

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.
Quarter-mile champion of the United States and Canada.

The track meet, which was to be held in connection with the Dorchester Day celebration, but which was postponed on account of the weather, will be held Saturday.

The entry list has been reopened and many of the school and college stars who were unable to compete last week will enter for the coming games. This meet is conducted by the city of Boston under the direction of the park and recreation department and is open to the public. All of the star athletes in the city have already sent in their entries and promise to be on hand Saturday.

An event that is attracting a great deal of comment is the running high jump, in which J. O. Johnstone of Harvard, H. Barstow of the B. A. A. and Moffatt, also of Harvard, are entered. All of these athletes have shown better than six feet, while Johnstone has been credited with the fine distance of six feet three inches.

Barstow, the Lincoln champion, is conceded the New York critics to be one of the greatest high jumpers competing today. These men should furnish plenty of competition in this event, as many school and college stars of unknown ability have also entered.

Frank Nardini, the Colby athlete who last year won the New England college sprint championship in fine style, is entered in the one hundred yard dash. Nardini has been filling himself for the coming New England championships and will be in his best form. Freddy Burns and Francis Urban, both of the B. A. A. will also compete, and should finish well up in the final heat.

Fiona Illsley, the B. A. A. athlete, is out to win the broad jump at this meet and has been training faithfully for the event. Illsley held the run with Sam James of Bucke and David Caldwell, both of whom are representing the Boston A. A. Burke is running in fine style, as a few weeks ago he won the Southern Atlantic A. A. U. half-mile championship.

Connie Mack Signs Lowell High Star

Edward Cawley, the star shortstop of the Lowell High School baseball team, is wanted by Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics and it is believed by many of his friends that he has already signed. Cawley has played on the High school team for the past two years and last season was its captain. He is a wonderful fast fielder and can hit the ball hard. He was recommended by Scout Brannan.

Cawley would not admit that he had already signed, stating that he would like to enter some preparatory school in the fall, but those close to him say he has affixed his signature to a contract.

HARVARD CREWS SHOW WELL IN TRIAL RACES

RED TOP, Pa., June 12.—The Harvard crews put in a busy day yesterday, most of the hard work being done in the morning on a choppy river and strong winds against them. The principal event of the morning's work was the four-oared race between three fours over their respective distances. Coach Wray took the three crews down to the two-mile mark and sent them off, they all rowing about 31.

The freshmen at first could not hold their place at this stroke, so they raised the stroke to 36 and at the three-mile mark where they dropped out were on even terms. The other two varsity fours continued at the same stroke until about a quarter of a mile from the finish, where the first raised the stroke to 40 and rapidly pulled away, finishing about seven lengths ahead.

Coach Wray was much pleased at this performance, as the four has not been showing much and several changes had been made, but yesterday's work showed that the crew has speed.

The eights were sent down stream to the Navy Yard and had several racing starts and went bushes being used in place of cannon balls were paid pull a lar attention to the said men, reconciling them on their individual faults.

The weather remains cool, and the men are holding their weights finely.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Ping Bodie's triple followed by a single gave the White Sox their only run in the ninth inning yesterday, but this was not hard to win, as Bodie's hit was a lucky one, after the Tigers had retired in order.

Manager Stallings of the Braves has announced that he will not sign any more players this season, as he has a full team and is satisfied with it. He has also announced that he will not release any of his players, as he has a full team and is satisfied with it.

Latest reports from Philadelphia are to the effect that although Jack Barry, the Iron Man shortstop of the Athletics, is not in his usual form at the bat, it will be unwise for him to quit the game, as his fielding is the best of any shortstop in the league.

The Giants and Cubs battled to another ten inning game yesterday, the third extra session game in the series, and the New Yorkers finally won the victory by pounding out three runs in the tenth inning.

Joe Jackson, the Naps' star outfielder, has been batting at a .400 clip for the last two weeks, and is now batting .400 for the season.

Lee Naps 1, A. A. 0. A double play, Jackson to Graney to Gessler, retired the side with the bases filled in the first inning.

Quaker town fans suffered a double blow yesterday. The Phillies were beaten by the Reds and the Athletics, after having won eleven games in a row, went down to defeat at the hands of the Browns, a home run by Catcher Agnew with two on bases in the ninth inning doing the trick.

URGE STATE'S HEALTH LAWS BE CODIFIED

By HARRY F. CASSIDY.

Dr. John H. Gifford of Fall River effectively presented the State Board of Health's plans to efficiency yesterday when at a public hearing before the Joint Recreation committee he declared the board kept down mortality but increased sickness.

Representing the Fall River Chamber of Commerce, a textile, cotton and silk manufacturing association, Dr. Gifford pointed out other points showed serious in asking for the appointment of a recreation committee to investigate the State's treatment of tuberculosis.

The AMERICAN asked that this committee also be empowered to codify the pure food and health laws of the Commonwealth, at the same time it was considering the reorganization of the State Board of Health.

Dr. Bigelow, the opponent of the board and its spokesman, tried to show the mortality of the State was low.

Gives Tuberculosis Facts.

"Yes, the mortality of the State is decreasing," replied Dr. Gifford. "But while the mortality is decreasing, the morbidity or cases of sickness are on the increase. By our methods of treatment we are keeping people from dying. We are not helping them to get well."

Representative Mulvey of Fall River had charge of the report favoring a recess committee bill.

In 1907 there were in the State of Massachusetts 4,771 deaths from tuberculosis. In 1911 there were 4,418. While the deaths decreased by 353 the cases of tuberculosis increased.

Boston spends seven times more to prevent tuberculosis than the State has only 1,000 beds. There are 10,000 cases of tuberculosis, every one needing a bed."

Junius T. Adgate, counsel for the AMERICAN, said:

"I know no prejudice the Legislature has against the appointment of recess committees. They act at Summer, make reports and these reports go to the Legislature, which turns them down because they are useless.

"But if there is one recess committee which cries for appointment this year it is the one to codify the health and pure food laws of the State. No advance has been made in food legislation for thirty years until the AMERICAN started its pure food campaign six months ago.

Criticises State Board.

"We have lots of this talk about legislative reference, but the public in Massachusetts has to demand action. States in pure food legislation. The State Board of Health has not appeared to be interested in any of the legislation.

"The committee should not be composed of members of the present boards and bureaus, but should be made up of men who will work with the Legislature now has not time to work out a complete pure food legislation of health and free food laws will bring Massachusetts to the front, where she stood forty years ago.

"A recess committee will show up what your pure food laws can be made to be improved."

REVIVES DEAD MAN BY BLOOD TRANSFUSION

NEW YORK, June 12.—Dr. A. L. Soresi of Fordham University, announced today that in his belief science would shortly find a way to restore the dead to life.

Dr. Soresi, who is attached to the staff of Flower Hospital, said he tried his method upon a dying pneumonia patient and effected immediate. The patient is alive today.

"I resorted to the infusion process," said the doctor, "using a man who volunteered his blood. The infusion was made in the jugular vein. For half an hour the blood of the healthy man flowed into the veins of the dying man. It went through the right side of the heart, and after going through the system reached the left side of the heart. The result was miraculous.

"I am so certain of the efficacy of the infusion method that I am not afraid to predict that some way will be devised to get the blood directly into the left side of the heart and once that is done the dead can be brought back to life.

"When the way has been found to connect directly with the left side of the heart medical science will be able to restore human beings to life after all animation has been suspended, providing there is no organic trouble. Resuscitation will be effective in cases of gas or drug poisoning, hemorrhages and such diseases as typhoid fever and pneumonia. Sudden death by accident when no vital organ has been crippled, will fall within the scope of the transfusion method. Under the new science it will be possible to restore life after it has been extinct as long as half an hour."

THE TRIPLE TIE

The Most Absorbing New Serial Any Newspaper Has Published in Years

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

What Has Gone Before

GORDON KELLY, a young man from the mountains, who says that he has never played on any ball club and that he has never even seen a ball game in his life, joins the Atlanta club and by his phenomenal playing becomes the sensation of the baseball world and the Boston Red Sox buy his release for $40,000. In the meantime, he meets and falls in love with Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a rich timber speculator. In his final game in Atlanta Gordon hits a terrific smash. He reads in three runs, but in sliding for home he crashes into the catcher, is knocked unconscious and his leg is broken. Mildred Deery runs on the field and takes his head in her lap. The night after Gordon Kelly leaves the hospital he disappears as if from the face of the earth.

When Galen Deery reads in the papers of how his daughter figured on the ball field, he is thunderstruck and arranges to take her up to his bungalow in the mountains. Forrest Cain, a rich young man, who has become Gordon's enemy, also loves Mildred. He follows her and calls on her every day, until he is called back to Atlanta by his sister's illness. One day Mildred goes on a fishing trip with Elmer Sheppard, a boy, and is surprised by the sudden appearance of Gordon Kelly. For a moment he holds her in his arms, and then they are interrupted by Elmer. Gordon says he lives there.

Gordon Kelly's disappearance greatly worries the Red Sox management and detectives endeavor to find him, but in vain. But late in August, Farnsworth, the sporting editor of the Atlanta "Georgian," recalls the incident in which Mildred Deery figured, ascertains from her father where she is, and hunts her up. He learns that Gordon Kelly had lived near the Deery bungalow all his life and that he had recently spent some time there, but that he had disappeared at the time of a cyclone in July.

Forrest Cain returns to the mountains and takes Mildred to ride. He asks her to be his wife and when she refuses he becomes ugly. Gordon and Elmer come upon them and Cain tries to shoot Gordon, but a stone thrown by the boy knocks the pistol from his hand. The shock sends Mildred to bed, but three days later she is talking with Gordon over the telephone

Now Go On with the Story

WHEN Gordon spoke again his voice was lowered.

"Tell me, please; when will you feel we'll enough to let me see you?"

Mildred unconsciously lowered her voice, too.

"Why—I feel all right now. I'm not ill any more."

"May I call this afternoon?" he said, eagerly.

"Certainly; delighted to have you. But, suppose I meet you?"

"Fine! Great! Where?"

"At—at—say at the bridge at 3. Now, good bye; I must give Elmer his lesson in French." If Mildred could have seen through the telephone, she would have seen Gordon slam up the receiver and turn three backward somersaults without stopping.

After all the threats, Elmer didn't take his lesson. It is true the books were produced and Mildred sat down at a table, opposite Elmer on the porch and [illegible] the dignified air of a schoolmarm, but that was as far as they got with the foreign language that morning. It was all off when Elmer said with a grin:

"They didn't know any Mr. Kelly up there, did they?"

No Gordon Kelly.

"What do you know about it, you little rascal?" demanded Mildred.

"I know all about it. There's no such man as Gordon Kelly."

"What do you mean, child?"

"I mean just what I say: There's no such person as Gordon Kelly."

"That's simply nonsense, Elmer; what in the world ails you today?"

"Oh, I got you buffaloed all right, Mildred, ha, ha," and he laughed gleefully.

"Elmer, you can be the most tantalizing boy I ever knew when you want to be. Now look me straight in the eye and tell me what you mean."

"I'm telling you the truth, Mildred," said the lad, seriously. "His name isn't Gordon Kelly at all; it's Mr. Bud."

"Mr. Bud! Elmer, you're simply crazy. I won't listen to you any more. Take your books and go away."

"Now, Mildred, listen. I'm not fooling at all." Thereupon he told her of finding the telephone beside the knoll and calling up Gordon Kelly and of his conversation with Steve, the colored boy. When he had finished Mildred tossed her head in the air and said with decision.

"I'll find out what his name is mighty quick."

"When?"

"This afternoon. Now, I'll excuse you from taking your lesson this morning. Get my little ride and go off somewhere and practice at a target."

"Oh, goe, Mildred, you're just great," cried the lad as he ran into the house to fetch the rifle.

Mildred's Thoughts

But Mildred wished to be left alone. She went to the hammock and curled herself in it and gave herself over to her thoughts. If Manager Bill Smith of the Atlanta ball club could have been with her at that moment they would have agreed without argument that Gordon Kelly, or Mr. Bud, or whatever the strange man's name was, was the most mysterious individual in the world.

Mildred began to go over the entire situation in her mind. She hadn't gone far when she suddenly came to the realization that she hardly knew anything at all about Gordon Kelly. She knew nothing about his family, his life or his habits. He had been introduced into her family as Gordon Kelly, yet here, up in his mountain home, no one knew of a Gordon Kelly. They called him Mr. Bud. Who was Mr. Bud? Her father certainly didn't know him by that name. He had told her that he had met Gordon Kelly through Judge Barbee. Certainly the Judge wouldn't be a party to any deception. Was Gordon Kelly an assumed name? Was it an alias? Her father had told nothing about Gordon Kelly's family—because he didn't know anything about it himself, probably.

Was his family "respectable?" Did he really own the property, or was he an employe or representative of the people that did own it? He might be a foreman or a superintendent. No harm in that, thought Mildred, but she would like to know about it.

Then she reviewed her brief acquaintance with Gordon Kelly. She recalled the conversations she had had with him in the few times they had met. The talk, she remembered, was mostly about books and music and kindred topics and the small talk that two young people would indulge in. It came back to her that he talked with great intelligence on music and art and literature. Surely he was refined and cultured. His family must be "respectable."

Smiled Contentedly

And then Mildred thought of Gordon Kelly the MAN—the tall, fine-featured, broad-shouldered, strong and powerful MAN. And her mind dwelt on his simplicity of manner, his kindness and gentleness and his prowess on the ball field and his bravery so lately displayed. And she was satisfied. She smiled contentedly to herself as she lay curled in the hammock. No, she would not break the engagement she had for 3 o'clock that afternoon, but she would find out all about the Gordon Kelly-Mr. Bud mystery.

"Make me look pretty, Mandy," said Mildred to her maid, who assisted her to dress when the time came. "I've got a 'portant 'gagement fo' dis' afternoon."

She seldom allowed herself to unbend in dignity to her maid, but today she was feeling very cheerful and happy.

"Will you wear your tan dress, Miss Mildred?" asked the maid.

"No, Mandy, I'll wear the light blue, it's more becoming, don't you think so?"

Thus arrayed she went out on the porch and asked Elmer to bring the run about around. When it came she stepped in it and took her place behind the wheel.

"Good-bye, Elmer, see you later," she said to the lad.

"Gee, ain't I going, too?" said Elmer in a tone of disappointment.

"Not this time, honey; good-bye."

Before the car was fairly in motion the boy jumped on the side of it and leaning over whispered mischievously in Mildred's ear:

"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

"You little wretch," exclaimed Mildred blushing furiously.

But she turned her head a moment later and waved her hand and smiled at him.

CHAPTER XXX.

WHEN Forrest Cain, lying unconscious in the road beside his automobile, regained his senses he saw Gordon Kelly standing over him. His mind was befuddled and he did not recall what had happened to him. Kelly prodded him with the toe of his shoe as though he was a dead snake and said, sharply, "Get up."

Cain rose slowly to his feet. The fight was all out of him.

"Walk around," ordered Kelly. Cain took a few steps. Kelly left him and joined Mildred and Elmer. "He is all right. Get in the car, please, and we will get out of this."

Without even another glance at Cain the three entered Kelly's automobile and a minute later they were whirling down the road, leaving Cain, with singular indifference, to his own meditations.

Cain was sober by this time—sober, sullen and resentful. His right hand pained him. He looked at the back of it where the stone thrown by Elmer had struck him. It was crushed and bleeding. The fingers hung down as though without life. He felt of the bruise and winced. There was no doubt but that bones were broken. He cranked the motor with his left hand, entered the car and attempted to set the control into low speed, but found he had lost the use of his right hand. Reaching over with his left hand, however, he was able to manipulate the lever and then, easing in the clutch, the car moved slowly ahead. It was necessary to turn around. This was accomplished with infinite labor and finally the car was straightened out for the journey to Cain's shack. This had to be taken at low speed, however, because once the car started ahead he could not change the speed, as he only had the use of his left hand and could not take that from the steering wheel in order to change gears.

The Mountaineer

In gloomy silence he crawled back the six miles to his mountain habitation. He summoned his man George and commanded him to pack up. His campaign had utterly failed. He would go back to Atlanta to nurse his injury, nurse his lacerated feelings and plan some revenge that would settle scores with Gordon Kelly once and for all. While his man was busy packing he bathed his hand in cold water and, after pouring whiskey on the wound as an antiseptic (and pouring a considerable quantity of it down his throat as an antiseptic) he bandaged the injured member, swore at George on general principles and went outside to smoke and think some more.

In his three personal encounters with Gordon Kelly Cain had been badly worsted, verbally or physically, every time. Yet Gordon Kelly was in no way to blame in any case. He was attending strictly to his own business and had sought no quarrel with the man who declared himself his foe. This phase of the matter never once entered the mind of Cain. He only knew that it was through Gordon Kelly that all his troubles came.

At this point his sullen reveries were interrupted by the appearance of a tall, raw-boned, black-bearded man, dressed in the uncouth hebilments of the backwoods. Without a nod or any salutation, he made known the nature of his business.

"We done run out of matches," he said. "Got any?"

Cain was accustomed to deference from those he considered beneath him.

"What do you want of them?" he asked with a scowl.

"Eat 'em, mebbe; what's that to you?" drawled the stranger.

"Where do you come from?"

"None o' your damned business. Ef yer ain't got no matches, say so."

"You're on my property; you're trespassing," declared Cain.

"What do you all reckon you're goin' to do about it?" observed the stranger in the same even tone.

What Could He Do?

What could he do about it? Cain asked himself. What chance would he have with this backwoodsman if he attempted to evict him, especially with a damaged hand? The thoughts of his hand instantly put his mind back to the encounter with Gordon Kelly. And thinking of Gordon Kelly suddenly put another idea in his head. His face wrinkled into what he intended for a smile.

"I beg your pardon, stranger," he said in his pleasantest manner, "I met with an accident this afternoon and my hand gives me so much pain that it puts me out of sorts. You can have all the matches you want. And as I'm going back to the city there's a lot of other stuff in the shack you are welcome to if you want to take it away—a lot of stuff to eat and maybe a little to drink. And that reminds me, will you join me in a drink?"

Thus mollified, the stranger remarked that he didn't care if he did. Cain ordered George to fetch a table, two chairs, a bottle of whiskey, some glasses and fresh water.

"I call that right good stuff," remarked Cain when they had sampled the contents of the bottle. "You don't get any like it in this part of the country, do you?"

Cain was treading on dangerous ground, if he had only known it. The stranger eyed him narrowly and did not make direct reply to the question.

"You all is named Cain and you come from Atlanta, don't you?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Cain.

"You done own a right smart piece of property up yere, don't yer?"

"I do."

"What you all doin' up yere?"

Burke—But that don't do me any good; I ain't Hayes.

Before the car was fairly in motion the boy jumped on the running board and whispered mischievously in Mildred's ear: "Good by, Mrs. Gordon Kelly"

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

EVERY two or three weeks, Daysey Mayme Appleton selects a new hat and gown, packs a grip and attends some national or international convention of women, called to improve the financial, spiritual, moral, psychic or physical condition of humanity.

Having prepared themselves before their mirrors for the onerous work of these conventions, the women read papers on "Psychic Thought," "The Waitress of the Uplift and Why," "That Monster, Man," etc., none of which applies to any ordinary human need.

Daysey Mayme Appleton read the newspapers thoughtfully. It was the season for the cleaning of wool garments, Winter hats and furs before storing them away for the Summer, and the Fire Department and the Coroner were kept busy.

With her mind on what she had been reading, she arose to address the International Convention of the Order of Suppressed Sisters, called to adopt drastic measures to secure the ballot.

A GREAT PERIL

The moment she faced her audience of willow plumes and purple roses every word of the eloquent and masterly address she had prepared vanished from her mind. She saw only the greater peril of her sex.

"It is said," she began, "that women are growing more progressive; that their mentality is better developed, and that they have a higher understanding of the real vital needs of the day than more men."

She paused for applause. She got it. It was the last she got that day.

"There is nothing in it." Her hearers gasped.

"Before giving women the right of the ballot, she should be asked this question: 'Do you fill the bathtub with gasoline and clean dresses and furs and curtains in it?'

"If she replies in the affirmative, she is not mentally fit to decide on the merits of an applicant for the position of dog catcher."

NEVER COMPLETED

"I tell you, my Suppressed Sisters, if you want to uplift your sex before gasoline does it; if you"—

Her sentence was never completed. One of the Suppressed Sisters sought to drown the speaker's voice by shuffling her feet. She shuffled them on a match lying on the floor. There was a roar, a burst of flame, a crash, and nineteen women who were wearing dresses soaked that morning in gasoline were blown through the skylight.

"It was a very elevating session," murmured Daysey Mayme, picking herself up on a roof three blocks away.

NEIGHBORLY HINT

"People as keeps 'ens," observed the lady at No. 17 Acacia terrace, "should keep 'em at 'ome. One of these old days, when your fowls come scrapping in our garden you'll be missin' some."

The lady at No. 19 sniffed disdainful defiance.

"If 'er was to feed your cat properly, p'raps it wouldn't go 'untin' round for bulbs," she observed. "Then you wouldn't 'ar the blame on 'ens what belongs to your neighbors."

A week later the lady at No. 17 again addressed her next door neighbor.

"Thanks for your 'int about 'ealin' our cat better," she said.

"Pleased you found it pay," returned No. 19.

"I should never a-found out what a wonderful cat it was if it 'adn't been for you," smiled No. 17. "Since you spoke about it, I made up a couple of straw beds in the toolhouse, and sprinkled a little barley flour, and blest if that cat ain't laid two nice eggs every mornin' since."

And next day there was a wire fence round the henhouse at No. 19 that an elephant couldn't break through.

The Brinkley Bathing Girls

Four Outfits for Seashore Girlies

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1912, by International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says—

FOR the girl who really swims—the two in the centre—caps as snug and plain as can be, tights, shoes whose ribbons wrap only as high as round the ankles, where they never slip down, a dress like a little coat to slip on and button all the way down the front with really truly buttons and buttonholes, plenty of shoulder and arm room, no band around the waist, but a belt about the hips, if you will, with all the colors of the rainbow in it if you yearn for a little fuss on it. In my eyes these plain, corsetless, undecorated, comfy sea-going outfits are smarter than the most conventional frocks cut in the same lines, with the same ginger-bread on them, as our dresses we wear on dry land.

For the girl who dons a bathing suit, but doesn't go near the water, the outter frocks, such sleeves as her riotous fancy cares for and as tight as she will, ruching in the neck, a sailor collar, tassles, girdles and sashes, high shoes like a Roman soldier, caps like bonnets or Bulgarian stocking caps with a tassel over one shoulder—and CORSETS, if she likes them. You'd be mazed to find how many Bettys wear corsets around the edge of the sea, and even into it.

Of course, if you're awfully smitten with a Roman sash you can wrap it about the hips of either of the two middle frocks, but don't have the ends too long, for they're warranted to wrap around your arm on the back stroke, or get you by the neck like an eel, when you're showing off.

Flatter Your Home Folks

BY DOROTHY DIX

CONSIDERING that vanity is the most prominent and universal human attribute, and that we are all brother and sister to the duffer who can be cajoled along anywhere, but cannot be driven a step, isn't it queer that we have never found out how much more efficacious a weapon praise is than blame?

Personally, we all know in our secret souls, that we are easy marks in the hands of the flatterer, and that we may be twisted around the finger of the jollier, and yet, we are so stupid that we never think of applying to those about us the means by which we are ourselves so easily worked. It's the greased hinge that swings to our lightest touch, not the rusty one that we batter at with a sledge hammer.

Of course, we should put in our best effort, and time, and thought in correcting our faults and strengthening our weak performances. As a matter of fact, we do just the opposite. It's our virtues that we magnify, and the things that we do well, and that we know we are going to be praised for, that we strive to do better and better.

It's the people who give us the glad hand that influence us, not those who use a club on us, and the surest way to develop the characteristic you want in anyone about you is to keep a rosy spot light turned upon it.

POOR JOHNNY

For instance:

Every mother is anxious for her children to be courteous, and to have good manners. In order to achieve this the average mother is just one incarnate "don't." It's Johnnie, don't come to the room with your hat on; Johnnie, don't sit still in your chair while a lady stands; Johnnie, don't do this; Johnnie, don't do that, and Johnnie gets his back up and says to himself that he isn't going to be bothered with all that foolish nonsense and he's going to do exactly as he pleases.

I know one mother with two boys who, observing the futility of blaming children for their bad manners, decided to try what praising them for their good manners would do. She would remark where her Johnnie could hear it upon his exquisite courtesy to women, and thereupon Johnnie would break his neck to open doors and pick up handkerchiefs for ladies, and you couldn't have kept him in his seat on the subway while a woman stood if you had nailed him to it. Johnnie's mother also casually remarked to him how gratifying it was to her that he had such good table manners, and from there on Johnnie ceased to be a "spotter" and became a connoisseur among the which-is-which of the forks and spoons on the dinner table.

Another equally sagacious mother had a boy with no especial aptitude for learning and an avowed distaste for reading, in vain was he scolded for his bad marks at school and his lack of interest in his studies. His mother was in despair, until one day, just by chance, when some subject pertaining to United States history was under discussion, Tommy was able to supply a date correctly that was in dispute.

His mother saw a great light. She began to praise Tommy for his knowledge of history and to casually refer to it before guests. It was up to Tommy to make good, and to sustain his reputation, and he began to study history with such vehement determination that he is getting a good education, and will probably be an authority on history, sure enough, some day.

A BAD TEMPER

I knew a little girl who had a terrific temper. Her mother tried in every way to teach her to control it. She pointed out to Sallie how unlovely and unattractive a shrewish woman was, and how everybody would hate her and avoid her if she gave way to fractiousness. All in vain. Sallie was insensible to that view of the subject.

Finally one day her mother said to her: "You have a brilliant mind and a wonderfully strong will. I wonder that any one with your intelligence and your determination of character should be dominated by a weakness." That appealed to Sallie's vanity, and just to show that she was stronger than her temper she conquered it so that today she has a reputation for amiability.

And if you can do more with soft words than with hard ones with children, how very, very more efficacious in fairies than knocks in the family circle! Believe me, it is soft soap that makes the domestic machinery revolve without a hitch.

Who is the woman who spends hours and days hovering over the kitchen stove concocting toothsome dishes for her lord and master? Is it the wife of the man who is always balling her because she can't make bread like mother used to make? Nay, verily. The woman who knows that her best culinary efforts are going to be growled over, any way, stops on the way home from her bridge whist and buys an unsavory mess at the delicatessen store, which she sets before the grouch, and is tied to.

THE SECRET

It is the wise husband who praises his wife's handiwork as he eats, who fares sumptuously every day, for there's some encouragement to a woman to make a home, offering of herself if she is going to receive the proper appreciation for it, but nobody wants to be an unsung martyr.

Who is the woman who pares, and scrimps, and economizes, and chases the town for bargains, and makes over her old clothes and retrims her hats? Is it the wife whose husband is always bawling her for her extravagance? Not much. She feels that discussion as she is going to be blamed anyway, she had as well have good clothes by way of consolation. The woman who squeezes a nickel until the buffalo on it howls with pain is the one whose husband is always boasting that she is such a financier that if she had her due she would be Secretary of the Treasury.

Also you may observe, that the husbands who are nailed to their own firesides are the men whose wives are always telling about how entertaining John is, and how big and strong and handsome and wise he is. Keeping flattery on tap at home is like keeping Scotch on the sideboard. A man doesn't have to run around the corner to get it. Also it's generally a better brand and not so expensive.

The moral of all of which is that praise is the lever by which each of us can move our little world. And the moral fools is we, that we haven't sense enough to use it oftener.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THERE was two ladies up to the house last nite. Both of them has daughters ready to get going in the matrimonial & that makes them feel kind of lots sick themselfs, I guess, cuzzums that is all that they did all the time they was in the house, talk about love. I'd almost like it a bit because both of the ladies was prader than me is & I have often herd Pa say that whenever anni talk about other topics than love they git middel aged, topics like church work or how much life insurance Cater Bostwick is going to leave, them was they dite.

One of the ladies was nained Missus Raymond & the other was Missus Belcher. Missus Raymond said to Pa:

"I was just telling your wife berfour you came in the room how sweet & innocent and guiless my little daughter looked today and she was making caves som pretty material for her trousseau. The dear little sheeps seemed so charming and confused and bewilderingly pretty, I wonder if I shood let a man that is going to take her away from me, sed Missus Raymond. Then she began to cry.

I dunno, think I wood say if I was you, dearest. Ma said to her. So calm yurself & talk routine in thinking about the pritty peasm that my husband is going to make for me. Maybe you will be marie a grate deal of the time. Won't that be nice & comfortable? Ma sed to her.

It will be pretty tuff soon beef for her husband, sed Pa, the song lady's husband, I mean. Wife and Pa, I suppoze you remember the time we were living mother calm here all the way from Wisconsin & started out to trying to be the managing edidor of our litlel hoam. Of course, you remember it, sed Pa. Will you ever forgit, sed Pa, the look of pained surprise that calm into her eyes wen I explained to her, as gently as I cud, that she didn't have anything in the world to say about the management of my domestic affairs? If my memory doesn't fail me, Pa sed, & I do not think it does she stayed only three days instead of all Summer.

You acted like a perfect cave man all the time she was here, remonstrated, sed Ma. No wunder my poor mother seldom mentions you in her letters.

But, as I was saying about my daughter, sed Missus Raymond, I embrider help thinking as I was here & saw her, a dainty bud with youth's fresh bloom on her cheeks, that no man in this world was good enuff to be the husband of so divine a creeture. Of course, I don't mean to say that there isn't a splendid young man & he the vice president of a big bank. But never he the president of the United States, you Missus Raymond, no mother is good enuff for my daughter. No man is good enuff for a woman.

They are good enuff for a woman around here day, sed Pa. I have often a noticed that when it gets near the first of the month my wife begins looking at her head for gray hairs & thinking I see dere old boy, & the morning of pay day, Pa and she always folows me to my desk & kisses me eggsess & eggse & with the tire lite shining in her eyes & says Be nice & come home early with a pare pay today, won't you, darling.

So, my daughter, and Missus Raymond, I don't let you go & for my daughter, son, and Missus Belcher, it seems as if such monster of the sea was coming nearer & nearer to drag my daughter from her mother's arms. You see dere old boy, began to cry & Pa stood out of the room & went in the library were the wife board is.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stock markets were stronger this morning, recovering at the opening to some extent from the effects of the bear raid late yesterday. In London American stocks were irregular and sentiment towards them was uncertain. Canadian Pacific made a partial recovery there. The situation in the Balkans was still a cause for worry.

A bull factor in New York was the announcement that the Treasury Department is prepared to issue currency under the Aldrich-Vreeland act. At the opening most transactions were at advances. The gains ranged from fractions to 2¾, the latter being made by Canadian Pacific. That stock opened at 212⅝ and rapidly rose to 215, much of the buying coming from London.

Steel Common, which yesterday fell to 40¼, the lowest price of the year, opened ¾ up at 50¾. Union Pacific was in increased demand notwithstanding the fact that Wednesday's slump carried it to a new low level.

Union Pacific began ¼ higher at 138⅛, but within half an hour sold at 138½. Among the other gains were Amalgamated ⅝, American Can 2, B. & O. ½, Southern Pacific ⅝, Reading ¼, Pennsylvania ⅝, Northern Pacific 1⅛, Missouri Pacific ⅝, Louisville & Nashville 1½, St. Paul ⅝, 4½ per cent Northern preferred ¼, and American Smelting ⅝, St. Paul rallied above par, selling around 100¼. There was no forced liquidation and the indications were that there was considerable investment buying. Declines in the time money rate was without bearish effect.

The Curb was steady.

France May Boycott Yankee Stocks.

Prince Poniatowski, a leading banker in Paris, who has just arrived in this country, denies he came to represent Frenchmen who have invested millions of dollars in St. Louis & San Francisco bonds. He thinks the receivership for that road may result in the practical cutting American securities, which are now in bad odor in his country.

"The St. Louis & San Francisco matter," declared the Frenchman, "is simply one more argument against American securities and probably will be a fatal blud, more brutal than the others. I think it will shut the French market to American securities.

"There has been bad luck in the relations between American and French financiers. There is a sentiment that when you issue a paper or when you issue a statement it will never go a week, month or year before it will be disclaimed.

"Take the case of the Central Pacific bonds that were sold in Paris. The bonds had hardly been issued and the ink on them was not dry when the bankers said: 'We have to withdraw the bonds or amend the deed of trust.'

"The New Haven 4 per cent. bonds were considered mighty high-class securities at the time they were placed here. Since then all we have heard was that Mr. Mellen was going to jail in a month; that he was ruining the Boston & Maine, which was going to pieces. So, we do not know where we stand.

"Take the Westinghouse bonds. They were issued in Paris, and the same day a receiver was appointed for the company. We could not follow that pace."

No Currency Act This Session?

The opinion is strong in Washington that there may be no currency legislation by Congress at this session as a number of Senators are opposed to early action. Senator O'Gorman is one and he is said to have more influence in the Senate than even Chairman Owen of the Banking and Currency Committee. Some Senators think that the question is too important to be settled by a hasty vote. Something developed at the capital last night which has been a relief to many. by President Wilson "to relieve the business world of uncertainty and to inspire confidence" Secretary McAdoo announced he "would not hesitate" to issue $500,000,000 of new national bank notes, based on the rich-Vreeland emergency currency act, if banks desired them.

This act, passed five years ago, gives him authority to issue additional currency to national banks and corporate associations upon the security of State and municipal bonds as well as government and also under certain conditions to commercial paper.

In accordance with the act the Secretary of the Treasury has actually in hand $500,000,000 in new national bank notes which can be issued immediately.

State Rights Again an Issue.

The Supreme Court decision on the Minnesota Rate Case has again raised the States rights issue in Congress. It was one of the several which led to the Civil War. There are Southern Congressmen who do not regard it as having expired with the "lost cause," and bitter opposition is expected to the bill to extend federal power over railroad rate regulation through the Interstate Commerce Commission to be introduced by Representative Willis of Ohio, a member of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. It contends that extension of federal power over rate regulation would lead to centralization, government ownership and finally "to the destruction of the republic and the establishment of a monarchy or a despotism."

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market was weaker at the start, spot being off 2s. 6d. and futures 5s.

Producers of the metal are reported in a standing firm for 13¾ cents a pound despite offerings around 13 cents cash by small dealers and second hands. Sales at the latter figure were reported yesterday, but it is said that if there were any they were for small lots. The business and financial situation is such that the trade in general does not expect much increase in demand at present. American consumers are buying as little copper as possible.

Financial News in Brief.

Bankers bought in all $25,000,000 of short-term notes yesterday, Speyer & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. taking $10,000,000 from the Baltimore & Ohio road and the Erie disposing of $5,000,000.

An order for 11,000 tons of steel rails has been received by the U. S. Steel Products Company from the Buenos Ayres & Pacific Railway Co., and another for 5,800 from the Uruguay Railroad.

The New York sub-treasury gained $16,000 from the banks yesterday and has gained only $380,000 since Friday. The Bank of England's minimum discount rate remained unchanged at 4½ per cent. today and its proportion of reserve to liabilities was 51.70 per cent. against 52.80 last week and compares with a decline from 51.70 to 49% per cent. in the corresponding week last year.

The rate of discount of the Bank of Bombay was reduced from 8 to 7 per cent. today.

Shipments by the U. S. Steel Corporation are now at the rate of about 45,000 tons a day and new orders are coming in at the rate of about 20,000. Owing to the lack of new business the steel market is greatly depressed.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN BOSTON JUNE 12, 1913

Democrats in the Legislature Are Betraying the Democratic Party

They Are Blasting the Proper Hopes of Lieutenant-Governor Walsh, Secretary Donahue and Other Good Men Who Have Led the Party to Victory—If They Obey the Railroad Lobby and Pass the Trolley Merger Bill Over the Governor's Veto, They Violate Their Platform Pledge and Betray the Public and Compel True Democrats to Seek True Democracy in Some Other Party

Are the Democrats of Massachusetts aware that nearly half of their Democratic representatives in the present Legislature are BETRAYING and ASSASSINATING the Democratic party?

Is the Massachusetts Democracy aware that these Democrats, under PRETENCE of a QUARREL with Governor Foss, are VIOLATING the party platform pledges at the behest of a powerful railroad lobby?

Does the Democracy REALIZE that the enactment of the Trolley Merger bill over the faithful veto of a Democratic Governor will blast the legitimate expectations of Lieutenant-Governor Walsh and Secretary Donahue and drive the Democratic party OUT OF POWER in this Commonwealth, perhaps forever?

Foss has been the most victorious leader the party has ever had. Walsh and Donahue have won places for the party which it has not held in forty years.

Are forty recreant Democrats to make this all FUTILE?

EVER SINCE this newspaper was founded, almost a decade ago, it has SUPPORTED THE FORTUNES of the DEMOCRATIC PARTY in this Commonwealth, save in 1907, when the railroad interests syndicated the party and placed Henry M. Whitney at the head of the Democratic ticket.

It was a brazen performance, for not only did Mr. Whitney publicly advocate a railroad monopoly in New England, but he had a notorious past in connection with legislative affairs in this State.

The year before, the AMERICAN, single-handed among the newspapers, had aided the late John B. Moran to save the Democratic party from the disgrace of Mr. Whitney's leadership. But in 1907, when the apostasy of Democratic politicians delivered the party over to Mr. Whitney and the railroad interests behind him, the AMERICAN refused to support the party ticket. Then an independent candidate, backed by this newspaper, RECEIVED MORE VOTES ON ELECTION DAY THAN MR. WHITNEY, AS THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE.

In all its long and variegated career the Democratic party never met such a disaster. It was crushed and flattened out and there seemed not a vital spark remaining.

Then the interests which had bedeviled it, leaving it for dead, returned to their NATURAL ABIDING PLACE—the Republican party and Governor Draper. NOW, fearing nothing from the helpless Democracy, they ran riot with the Republican party and with Governor Draper.

They made Draper recommend the Boston Holding Company to legalize the control of the Boston & Maine Railroad by the New Haven, and they made the Republican majority in the Legislature pass it.

They made Governor Draper recommend that the precarious bonds of the Boston Holding Company should become Savings Bank investments. The public and depositors did not dream that the New Haven's control of the Boston & Maine would be followed by a downward plunge in the Boston & Maine stock, the security for the bonds of the Boston Holding Company.

But an instinct of self-preservation WARNED the savings banks that this scheme spelled DISASTER to their institutions and jeopardized the millions of SAVINGS of the PEOPLE OF MASSACHUSETTS. Therefore, they defeated the proposal to make the savings banks finance the bonds of this Holding Company.

The railroad interests had now ridden a willing horse to death. Governor Draper began to stagger under an unpopular load. The Democratic party, EXORCIZED and PURIFIED by the departure of the bedeviling interests which had crushed it, rose upon an excellent platform of principles and, under the leadership of Governor Foss and with the support of the AMERICAN, drove Governor Draper from the chair.

This is a brief review of recent history to show that a catastrophe has followed each of the two old parties when the railroad interests possessed it. This fact is so well known to every man in public life, big or little, THAT WHOEVER, REPRESENTING THE DEMOCRACY IN OFFICE, YIELDS TO THIS RAILROAD INFLUENCE, KNOWINGLY HELPS TO LEAD HIS PARTY TO THE SHAMBLES.

Now, the Boston AMERICAN once before refused to be led to slaughter with the Democratic organization by those who delivered it to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

If this condition prevails again the AMERICAN proposes to repeat its action and to part company with the Democratic party in this State at the coming election.

Here is the story of what is transpiring at the State House. The Democratic party, in convention assembled, last Fall declared unequivocally, decisively AGAINST THIS TROLLEY MERGER BILL in these words:

"We are opposed to the ownership or control of our street railways by steam railroads, and we believe that it should go no further in this Commonwealth."

This bill had been passed the year before by the Legislature and had been vetoed on good Democratic grounds by the Democratic Governor.

This convention met for the SOLE PURPOSE of declaring the party principles to the people of the State. This platform was a SOLEMN PROMISE to the citizens.

PARTY POLICIES AND PARTY PRINCIPLES ARE MORE IMPORTANT THAN PARTY CANDIDATES, for this is a government of laws and not of men.

Men vote the Democratic, Republican or the Progressive ticket according as they agree with the platforms of those parties, and a platform therefore is the plight of the party's sacred honor, and every candidate, having the party nomination, whose action in office may affect the principles and policies laid down in the party platform, is under the most sacred obligation to be faithful to this pledge.

HOW have the Democrats in the Legislature KEPT THE FAITH? Forty Democratic representatives out of eighty-six Democrats recorded on the Trolley Merger Bill voted for it IN DEFIANCE of their party platform and of the solemn promise that their party convention made to the voters last Fall.

Governor Foss has again vetoed this vicious bill which would hand over to the New Haven Railroad the street railways in more than half the area of Massachusetts and which the Railroad Commission, the Public Franchise League, and the Chamber of Commerce and the Democratic convention all have condemned.

If those forty Democrats vote for the bill again, it will pass over the Governor's veto and will become a law, TO THE DISHONOR OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

Can the rank and file of the party stop this betrayal? Who will remain in the party whose representatives so lightly betray its cardinal doctrines? Will the Democracy be able to carry this shame any better than they carried the shame of the nomination of Mr. Whitney by the railroad interests?

The AMERICAN will not go before the people of this Commonwealth next Fall APOLOGIZING for such FLAGRANT APOSTASY as this consummated betrayal of the party platform would be.

The Progressive party proposes to SETTLE the whole railroad question by a referendum vote to the people. The Progressive party principles are SOUND and APPEALING.

The AMERICAN will not continue to fight in the ranks of a party so many of whose representatives are disloyal to its cause. If the citizens of Massachusetts and the voters of the Democratic party are betrayed by faithless and worthless Democratic Representatives entrusted with the people's power, the AMERICAN will again raise the banner of independence and rally the honest elements of the Democracy around it and lead them against a debased and discredited party organization which once more disgraces the party name and sacrifices the people's interest.

The AMERICAN will follow the principles of true Democracy even if it has to follow them out of the Democratic and into the Progressive Party.
